BRYAN COMES HERE ON PEACE MISSION

He Meets Lewis Nixon, Murphy's Agent, and the Situation Seems Less Warlike.

SAYS MONEY OPPOSES HIM

Is Being Used, He Declares, to Defeat His Nomination—Henry Watterson Out for the Nebraskan.

William Jennings Bryan arrived in town yesterday, and after he had spent a busy day granting interviews and seeing a lot of politicians, the Democratic situation in the State, which has been very much muddled since the State Convention adjourned, cleared up perceptibly. It seemd probable last night, according to some political observers, that the trouble between the Murphy-Conners combination and the malcontents up-State would be settled amicably, and that the delegation from New York to the Denver Convention might after all be for Bryan before the convention was called to order.

Whether or not the surmise that the party in this State would be solidified for Bryan amounts to anything, it was very evident throughout the day that Mr. Bryan was trying to bring about peace. He would not talk for publication on the State situation, and he even went so far as to deny that he had talked politics with the politicians who visited him. Nevertheless, one of his callers was Lewis Nixon, who is extremely close to Charles F. Murphy, and it was generally believed about the Hoffman House, where Mr. Bryan is stopping, that a meeting between the Tammany chief and the Nebraskan was arranged, and that assurances were given by Mr. Nixon to Mr. Bryan that he would eventually be supported for the nomination by the State delegation.

In an interview given out in the afternoon Mr. Bryan reiterated his charge that money was being used to obtain uninstructed delegations to Denver, and defended himself from the charge that has been made of late that he has ceased to be one of the "plain people" by reason of his increased income. A clipping was shown Mr. Bryan in which he was taken to task for having declared that money was being used against him.

Money Used Against Him, He Says.

"I never gave the interview on which this editorial is based," he said. "The Commoner has stated more than once that money was being used to secure the instruction of delegates opposed to me, in order that a third of the delegates to Denver might control the nomination. The Commoner has said that, and I am the editor of The Commoner. I know whereof I speak."

"Will you give the names of the men who are using the money?"

"I will not," said Mr. Bryan emphatically.

"Is there any money being used here in New York?"

"I haven't anything further to say on that subject."

"Isn't it fair to assume, inasmuch as the opposition to you here is as marked as it is anywhere, and that this is the money centre of the country, that—"

"I decline to go any further into the subject."

Mr. Bryan then acknowledged having seen Lewis Nixon, but said he had not talked politics, and that he had no engagement to see Mr. Murphy, though the latter might "drop in."

"I decline to say anything about the local situation," he replied, when asked further questions about Mr. Nixon's visit. "I have troubles enough of my own."

Mr. Bryan was then asked whether he had heard the report that the Hearst people had dropped him because he had ceased to be one of the real, dyed-in-the-wool "plain people" through his increased income.

"My income," he replied, "is derived mainly from my lectures, with something additional from articles written for other publications and something from my own paper. The amount of my income has been greatly exaggerated. I make more speeches for nothing than I do for pay, and I devote more time to public work than I do to personal gain. The income that I receive comes from the people who attend my lectures and who read what I write, and my obligation is to the whole people rather than to any special class.

His Views Unchanged.

"My views have not changed on public questions. I am standing for the same things now that I stood for then, and I think no one will deny that. I could make more by siding with the corporations than I could by lecturing. My political prominence has been an advantage to me in that it has given me a larger circle of readers and a larger audience, but I could have used that influence to greater pecuniary advantage. For instance, I was offered $25,000 a year as counsel for a corporation. But that position would have taken me out of the political field.

"By lecturing and writing I can make what I need in one-half the time, and have the rest for public work. Political prominence is an asset in any kind of business. I could not have turned my attention to anything where it would not have been an advantage, and had I used all my time lecturing and writing I would have made twice as much as I have made. The question is not what I have made, but whether I have made it legitimately. I think no one will deny that I have made it legitimately.

"The next question is whether my earning power has changed my view on public questions. No one would contend for a minute that it has."

At this point an eager young man asked: "Mr. Bryan, do you expect to be nominated for the Presidency of the United States?"

"Well, that is refreshing," said Mr. Bryan when he recovered. "Young man, have you read Julius Caesar?"

"Yes, Sir," said the lad.

"You remember he said Gaul was divided into three parts. If he had known you he would have struck out two of the parts."

Watterson for Bryan.

Mr. Bryan had breakfast with Col. Henry Watterson of Louisville. Later in the day Col. Watterson said:

"Personally I think that Mr. Bryan will be nominated at Denver, and I believe we have a good chance to elect him. The movement in the interest of Gov. Johnson of Minnesota comes too late and from the wrong quarter. If the interests that are urging his nomination now had backed me up when I advocated his candidacy ten months ago he might have a chance. But the Democrats of New York, in the present chaotic condition, cannot dictate to the majority of the Democratic Party."

With regard to the Republican situation Mr. Watterson said:

"I left Washington a few weeks ago

SACRILEGE BEFORE THE POPE.

Non-Catholics Kneel at Altar and Receive Communion from His Hands.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, April 20.—From the time of St. Peter to that of Pius X. the history of Papacy fails to record such a grave sacrilege is that which was committed yesterday inside the Vatican, under the eyes of the Pontiff himself.

While the Holy Father was celebrating mass and administering communion, three non-Catholics, who after great insistence had obtained through their Ambassador permission to be present at the Papal mass, approached the altar and received the communion from the hands of the Pope, afterward removing from their mouths the consecrated wafers, one of which was found on the floor.

These three persons knelt in the first row of communicants. Next them was the famous actress, Mary Anderson, and next her the sisters and niece of the Pope.

When the sacrilege occurred, Miss Anderson, who already had received communion, being deeply absorbed, only realized the incident through seeing the sister of the Pope, who was next her, raise both her hands in horror.

Members of the Papal Court—high prelates—noticing the insult, removed the offenders, who, however, attempted to justify their action by pleading ignorance of the Catholic procedure.

The Pope withdrew to his apartment evidently disturbed, exclaiming: "May God forgive them; they knew not what they did."

The incident brings out the peculiar situation of the Holy See. If the sacrilege had occurred in any church in Rome outside the Vatican, the offenders would suffer punishment according to Italian law; but the Vatican enjoying the right of extra-territoriality, the laws of Italy cannot be applied there.

BERLIN GLORIOUSLY HOAXED.

Reported Presence in City of W. K. Vanderbilt Causes Excitement.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 20.—A dispatch from Berlin says the Kaiser's capital is being gloriously hoaxed in consequence of its fondness for American millionaires.

On Saturday the papers announced that William K. Vanderbilt and his wife and daughter had arrived at the Hotel Bristol to spend the Easter holidays. One or two papers printed what purported to be graphic interviews with the distinguished visitor, and the hotel became within twenty-four hours the Mecca of scores of persons anxious to meet the distinguished guest.

The procession to the hotel included bankers with promotion schemes, picture dealers, motorcar agents, yacht and motorboat builders, representatives of hospitals, orphanages, and libraries, flying-machine inventors, and a nondescript collection of strange persons with proposals of various kinds.

Letters poured in addressed to "W. K. Vanderbilt, millionaire." One man in Saxony telegraphed he had two unknown Rembrandts and a Van Dyck to sell at bargain prices.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Vanderbilt was not in Berlin at all. His wife and her daughter, Miss Rutherford, together with Mr. Sands, her son by her first marriage, were there, but no Mr. Vanderbilt.

The hotel, however, is enjoying quite a run of prosperity on the strength of the report of Mr. Vanderbilt's presence, still generally believed, and many persons are engaging tables in hope of rubbing shoulders with an American Croesus.

$10,000 GEM THIEF CAUGHT.

Man Believed to Have Robbed Mrs. D. P. Morgan Arrested in London.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 20.—A prisoner giving the name of Claude Heritier, arrested on suspicion of having been implicated in the robbery of $7,000 worth of diamonds from the residence of Mrs. David Pierce Morgan in New York, was remanded in the Marylebone Police Court to-day.

He was carrying sixteen small diamonds valued at $400 when he was arrested, and was unable satisfactorily to explain where he got them. Scotland Yard declares the prisoner answers to the cabled description of one of the Morgan robbers.

Word was received here yesterday of the arrest of Claude J. Heritier in London by the Scotland Yard force at the request of the New York police. At Police Headquarters it was stated that Heritier is wanted on suspicion of having stolen $10,000 worth of diamonds and jewelry from Mrs. David P. Morgan of 70 Park Avenue, by whom Heritier was employed as second butler.

According to the police, Heritier disappeared on March 8, and the loss of the jewels was discovered soon afterward.

LONGSHOREMEN IN A RIOT.

Cotton Hooks and Bottles Are Used and Many Are Hurt in Shore Fight.

A hundred Irish dock laborers working at the White Star Pier 48, on the North River, and an equal number of Italians at the adjoining Pier 47 of the Quebec Steamship Company engaged in a battle early last evening. The warring factions lined up in front of the Seaman's Mission, at 399 West Street, and used cotton hooks and soda water bottles as weapons.

Police reserves drove the fighting men to cover after they had wrecked the café of Alfred Adler at 396 and 397 West Street. Joseph Bulger of 691 Greenwich Street got a scalp wound and had a finger nearly severed and one wrist nearly torn off with a cotton hook, which had passed entirely through it. Tony Lance of 36 Corlears Street got a gash in the back of his head and a possible fracture of the base of the skull. He will probably die. Twenty or more of the participants in the riot received broken heads and cut faces. The police arrested Joseph Kilgotz and Michael Tribotz of 72 President Street, Brooklyn, charging them with assaulting Bulger.

The surface car was set on fire. Traffic was delayed for five or six hours. The accident occurred where there was a similar collision last May, which resulted in the injury of thirty people, and after which the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company announced that it would install safety devices to avoid other collisions at this dangerous crossing.

WEISS, ALMA, 8 years old, her daughter; abrasions of the face and head; went home.

The Crossing a Dangerous One.

The crossing of Eighteenth Avenue and Eighty-sixth Street is accounted one of the most dangerous in Brooklyn. At this point trains that later run on elevated structures travel along the ground. The trains run approximately north and south here. The tracks for trolley cars run approximately east and west. A flagman is stationed at the crossing night and day.

Following the collision of a train and a surface car at this crossing last year, when thirty people were injured, residents of Bath Beach rose up in protest. It was stated that the flagman on duty there had gone away from his post, leaving in charge of his work a 12-year-old boy. It was promised on behalf of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company that safety devices would be installed at this crossing to prevent future collisions.

It was said by Bath Beach people last night that the only precautionary changes made in the matter of looking after the crossing was the substitution of four red flags and lanterns for the one that had formerly been used by the flagman, and the adoption of a new set of rules governing the signals there.

The flagman at the crossing last night was George Cordier of 120 Walworth Street, Brooklyn. At 7:35 a four-car train, fairly well filled with people, was coming north from Coney Island, bound for Manhattan, and a big surface car of the new type, of the Coney Island and Thirty-ninth Street Ferry line, was coming west.

The Flagman's Explanation.

Flagman Cordier said that he removed the lantern from the tracks of the train, and that he thought at the time that the surface car had come to a stop, since he had not removed the red lantern from across its track.

Whatever was the cause of misunderstanding, the big surface car started to cross the track up which the Coney Island train was running. It got just about three-fourths across the danger track when the train struck it.

The trolley car was lifted from the ground upon the platform of the first elevated car. It stood poised there, balancing back and forth. The trolley wires had crossed, short circuits had been formed, and the trolley car was set on fire at several points. As the car swayed back and forth the wires crossed and recrossed, and the neighborhood was lighted up with flashes of blue fire.

Wilbur E. Henderson, who has an undertaking shop near by, yelled to the crowd to jump on the train and help the prisoners to escape. He led the way. Many of the passengers on the train, who had stampeded out of it, gathered around the front of the trolley, aiding in the work of rescue. Lieut. McAvoy of Engine Company, 153 Twenty-fourth Avenue and Eighty-sixth Street, who was taking a day off and was on the train, was one of these.

A still alarm brought a truck with Fire Chief Hauck in command. Calls to Brooklyn Police Headquarters brought ambulances from the Reception Hospital at Coney Island, the Norwegian Hospital, the Kings County Hospital, and a private ambulance belonging to Kowski & Jantzer of Coney Island. The police reserves were rushed up from the Fort Hamilton and Bath Baech stations to hold back the crowds that had gathered.

When all but one or two of the imprisoned passengers in the trolley car had been helped out of it by way of the rear door it toppled down to the ground. Rescuers leaped into the wreck and pulled these persons out. The wires were pulled clear, and the fire put out. The thirteen injured people were taken into the nearby houses and stores, treated by the ambulance surgeons, and then most of them were able to go to their homes.

Flagman Cordier, Patrick O'Donnell of 737 Fortieth Street, Brooklyn, motorman of the train, and John Kealley of 193 West Ninth Street, Brooklyn, motorman of the trolley car, were arrested and taken to the Bath Beach Police Station, charged with criminal negligence. The police said that Kealley, who had charge of the big new-type trolley car, had been out of the training school only three days, and that he was barely twenty-one years old.

FIRE HALTS BROADWAY CARS.

Two Families Rescued and Half a Dozen Firemen Overcome.

A $1,000 fire in the five-story building at 233 Broadway, opposite the Post Office, tied up the Broadway cars for nearly two hours last night and filled the immediate vicinity with a dense smoke. Half a dozen firemen were overcome, but were revived by Dr. Bennet of St. Gregory's Hospital and Dr. Rogers of the Fire Department, and returned to work almost immediately.

The fire started in the barber shop of Louis Freda, in the basement of the building. Freda had just closed up for the night and had retired to his apartments on the top floor of the building. He was at supper with his wife and three children, three sisters of his wife, Marietta, Moretta, and Giovannitta Melucci, when he smelled smoke. He was making his way to the roof when the roof door was opened by his neighbor, Samuel Swenson, janitor of No. 231. With the aid of Swenson, Freda got his family to the roof. Then he made his way to the street with his family.

Swenson, on going to his apartments on the third floor of 231, found his wife and two children half suffocated, and rescued them.

Six firemen of Engines Nos. 6 and 10 were overcome, three of them being unconscious when brought out of the smoke-filled barber shop by their comrades. They were Frank O'Hara and Joseph Leary of Engine 6, and Charles Johnson of Engine 10. The cause of the fire is not known.

TROOPS TO EVICT FAMILIES.

Driven from Plum Island at Request of Lessee—One Family at Sea All Night.

Lieut. E. E. Farnsworth and twenty armed soldiers from Fort Hamilton landed from Sheepshead Bay on Plum Island yesterday to evict three families whom the lessee of the island, Winfred S. Overton of Whitestone, L. I., wished to remove. By nightfall the soldiers had evicted Capt. Archibald Steinhaus, his wife and two children, who put to sea in an auxiliary sloop, taking with them their belongings. It was the Captain's intention to spend the night at sea. The other two families are those of William Chambers, a printer, of Manhattan, and the steward of the Melrose Social Club.

The island is Government property, having been purchased by the War Department in its plans for the defense of New York Harbor. It lies between Sheepshead Bay and Barren Island. In Summer ninety-six families live there, but at present there are only five. It was leased to Overton for five years at $3,200 a year. He recently went to Washington and got the aid of the War Department in the eviction. The reason given by him is that the families concerned have defied him, but they deny this.

EASTER OFFERING $168,000.

Grace Church Gets Big Gifts—Large Sums for Other Churches.

Episcopal churches in this city suffered no falling off in their Easter collections this year. This is regarded as a sign that the people have entirely recovered from the recent financial unrest. The largest single offering was that received at Grace Church, Broadway and Tenth Street. It amounted to $168,000, which included a $40,000 memorial fund to be used for the endowment of a home for old men. This fund is in memory of Dorothea Wolfe Hoffman, and was given by her mother and sister. An offering of $116,500 was given as a Grace Parish centennial thank offering, and is to be used to purchase and lay out the ground on the south of the church on which Fleischmann's bakery has stood for years.

St. Bartholomew's Church, Madison Avenue and Forty-fourth Street, Easter offering amounted to a little more than $13,000. St. Thomas's Church, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-third Street, received about $10,000, to be used in aiding the poor. The Easter offering at St. George's Church, in Stuyvesant Square, amounted to $3,300. St. James's Church, Madison Avenue and Seventy-first Street, received $6,000, and the Church of the Holy Communion, Sixth Avenue and Twentieth Street, received $1,800, and Holy Trinity Church, Harlem, $11,000.

Christ Church, Broadway and Seventy-first Street, asked for $6,000 and received $5,300. St. Andrew's Church, Harlem, had an offering of $8,000, a larger amount than last year. The Church of the Incarnation, Madison Avenue and Thirty-fifth Street, had an offering as large as last year. Other churches fared equally well.

He emphatically denied he was already married to Mme. Gould, but declined to say what are his matrimonial plans, beyond exclaiming, "It is impossible to foresee what the future will bring."

The friends of Mme. Gould in this city understand that after landing from the steamer Friedrich der Grosse at Naples she will not come direct to Paris, but will continue for several weeks traveling in Italy.

MAY RUSH CRUISER TO VENEZUELA PORT

Government Anxious About Minister Russell, from Whom No Dispatches Come.

NO WORD FOR TWO WEEKS

President, It Is Reported, Is Considering Proposition to Send a Ship to Get Him and Bring Him Home.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Anxious over the long-continued silence of Minister Russell, the United States may dispatch a swift cruiser to Venezuela to demand the person of its representative at Caracas. Nothing has been heard from Minister Russell or the Consular officials for about two weeks. The plague is said to be raging in Venezuela, but the cable and the mails, as mediums of communication, should not suffer from it.

Although no open expression of opinion is offered, it is generally known that this Government is inclined to believe that a strict censorship may have something to do with Mr. Russell's inability to communicate with Washington. There is some basis for this suspicion in the manner in which Castro's Government tampered with the mail bags intended for the cruiser Tacoma, recently in Venezuelan waters. The demand for an explanation then brought forth the excuse that the bags were opened by "accident."

Assistant Secretary of State Bacon held a conference with Secretary Metcalf to-day. Later the two went to the White House, and were closeted with the President for more than half an hour. Neither Mr. Metcalf nor Mr. Bacon would divulge what took place.

It is known, however, that the Navy Department is completing preparations so that it may be able to rush the cruiser Des Moines to Venezuelan waters immediately, if a request that it be sent comes from the State Department. The warship, if sent, will bring Mr. Russell and his family away, if he has been unable to leave before its arrival.

The Minister is coming home, ostensibly on leave, but he is expected to bring with him a complete written report on the Venezuelan situation. He also has collected a mass of evidence which he will explain to the President and Secretary Root.

CASTRO WANTS WIRELESS.

Representative of De Forest Company to Arrange for Installation.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, April 20.—E. C. Newton, a representative of the De Forest Wireless Telegraph Company, left here on Saturday to arrange with President Castro for the installation of five wireless stations at different towns in Venezuela.

It is understood President Castro is seeking to establish a wireless service in Venezuela largely because of the strained relations that exist between the administration and the French cable company.

SHOT ON ELEVATED STAIRS.

Assailant Declares He Committed Act to Avenge Attack on Wife.

Richard Dormbush, 45 years old, who has a wife and three children living at 336 West Forty-ninth Street, was probably fatally shot last night on the Cortlandt Street elevated stairway. He was on his way to take a Ninth Avenue train home. He was taken to Hudson Street Hospital, where the surgeons said he had only a small chance of recovery, as the bullet had penetrated his lungs, where they feared to probe for it.

The man who shot him and confessed it, was Stephen Chrapper, 23 years old, a Hungarian baker, out of work, who lives at 150 Greenwich Street with his young wife. He was arrested by Policeman Hale just after the shooting and locked up in the Church Street Station. The revolver with which he had shot Dormbush was found on him.

Chrapper told Capt. Gallagher that on March 2 last Dormbush, who is a chef in a restaurant at the corner of Cortlandt and Greenwich Streets, had attacked his wife, who was employed in the kitchen where Dormbush worked. He said he had given $25 to a lawyer to prosecute Dormbush, but that the lawyer came back to him for $25 more, and then he decided to take matters into his own hands. He said he waited outside the restaurant last night, and shortly after 7 o'clock, when Dormbush came out, followed him and shot him.

Chrapper was charged with felonious assault, which will be changed to homicide should Dormbush die.

Farmers' Loan and Trust Company Seeks to Foreclose Second Mortgage.

Special to The New York Times.

The complainants asked that the receivership of Judge Thomas F. Freeman, granted in the suit of the Mercantile Trust Company of New York against the International & Great Northern Railroad, be extended to this suit. Judge McCormick thereupon entered a decree extending the receivership as requested, without requiring the receiver to take further oath of office or executing further bond.

BRONSON HOWARD VERY ILL.

Dramatist Suffers from a Rheumatic Malady—His Condition Improved.

Bronson Howard, the dean of American playwrights, has been seriously ill at his apartments, in the Evelyn Court, 611 West 114th Street, though the fact did not become public until yesterday. Inquiries by telephone were of no avail, since no connection with the apartment could be obtained. Inquiries at the court only elicited the information that Mr. Howard had been seriously ill for four weeks.

A friend of Mr. Howard's explained last night that the family did not wish to have the fact of his illness become known. He has been suffering with the same rheumatic malady with which he suffered while on his trip to Egypt, and at one time the physicians were much alarmed. However, he is now thought to be on the road to recovery. Mr. Howard's advanced age has made the attack more dangerous than it would have been for a younger man.

Will Complete His List of Engagements and Then Stay in Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Friends of Secretary of War Taft declare to-night that the big Cabinet official feels deeply the criticism leveled at him because of his frequent absences from Washington. It is declared that Mr. Taft has decided to complete his list of engagements, many of which were made months ago, and then to decline further invitations. His friends also declare that the Secretary of War has so organized and systematized his department that his absences have worked no hardship.

SUES GRACE M. COOKE.

Husband Wants Divorce from Writer on Ground of Desertion.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., April 20.—William Cooke, husband of Grace MacGowan Cooke, authoress, to-day filed suit for absolute divorce, charging desertion. Mrs. Cooke has been absent from Chattanooga since March 13, 1906, and has with her their two daughters, Helen, aged 13, and Catharine, aged 8. Mr. Cooke makes no charge other than desertion, stating that his wife preferred to pursue a literary life.

Miss MacGowan was married to Mr. Cooke on Feb. 17, 1887. Mrs. Cooke is the daughter of the late Col. J. B. MacGowan, for many years editor-in-chief of The Chattanooga Times. She was seriously injured in the fire at Upton Sinclair's literary colony, Helicon Hall, last year.

41 KILLED IN AUSTRALIA.

MELBOURNE, Australia, April 20.—Forty-one persons were killed and sixty injured in a collision last night between two trains at Braybrook Junction, eight miles from this city. A train from Bendigo, with two heavy engines, crashed into the rear of a train from Ballarat, wrecking five cars of the train.

The wreckage took fire and was almost completely consumed. Many of the bodies were unrecognizable when recovered.

Terrible scenes followed the collision. Many of the injured, being caught in the wreckage, were rescued with difficulty. It was a long time before doctors and nurses arrived on the scene, and as a consequence intense suffering prevailed among the injured.

SAYS LOEB OWNS STOCK.

Senator Also Mentioned in Washington Public Service Debate.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Declaring that Congress is seriously embarrassed in legislating for the District of Columbia by the interests of officials in local public service corporations, Representative Sims of Tennessee in a speech in the House to-day said that a member of the Senate Committee on District of Columbia owned 1,008 shares of the Capital Traction Company's stock, and that William Loeb, Jr., the President's private secretary, owned 4,700 more.

The Senator is Francis G. Newlands, a Democrat from Nevada. Mr. Sims said that he did not mean to say that this owning of local stock was unlawful, but merely that it was embarrassing when subjects of local import were up for discussion.

IRA McCORMICK HURT.

N. Y. Central Official and Two Guests Thrown from His Wagonette.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, April 20.—While on his way to the Harlem Railroad Station here this morning, Ira McCormick, Vice President of the New York Central Railroad Company, was thrown from a wagonette. He got a deep cut over the left eye, and one rib was broken. With Mr. McCormick were Ernest Barrett and G. S. Wright of New York, who had been spending Sunday as guests at the McCormick home.

Mr. Wright jumped from the rear of the wagonette and received a broken collar bone, while Mr. Barrett, who also leaped, got off with a sprained wrist and cuts about the head. The runaway team collided with a stone block, which stopped their progress. The driver was thrown to the roadway, but escaped injury.

The accident came as an ending to a ten day's house party which the McCormicks had held at their home, 111 North Broadway, White Plains.

PATH OF ROSES FOR ACTRESS.

Novel Tribute to Ethel Barrymore at Chicago "Beauty Banquet."

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 20.—Miss Ethel Barrymore literally walked on roses at a "beauty banquet" given by Chicago society in her honor at the Auditorium today.

From the threshold of the banquet room to her place of honor at the table was a carpet made from the petals of American Beauty roses. Miss Barrymore trod the long pathway ankle deep in rose leaves.

The idea of the luncheon was the exaltation of beauty in women, in art, in music.

'INSIDERS' PROFITS' A MYTH

System Throttled by Legislature and Courts, He Says, and Was Not Looted.

NO WATER IN THE STOCK

Says Tax and Transfer Laws Doubled Burdens and Reduced Earnings $6,000,000 a Year.

The Grand Jury which has been investigating the management of financial institutions and traction companies since Jan. 6 handed up to Justice Victor J. Dowling, in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court yesterday afternoon, a presentment in which it declared that it had not been able to find, in its investigation of the traction situation, evidence showing a commission of crime on which it could act. The Grand Jury was thanked by Justice Dowling and discharged, after which all of the members, headed by Foreman Edward J. Cuddihy, filed up past the Justice's bench and shook hands with the Judge and District Attorney Jerome.

Coincident with the Grand Jury's presentment Thomas F. Ryan made public a statement, which he had previously presented to the Grand Jury, when he appeared before it to testify as to his connection with city traction matters. Mr. Ryan reviewed the process of evolution of the Metropolitan system from 1885, when the Metropolitan Traction Company of New Jersey was formed with a capital of $10,000,000, when the stock was sold to the stockholders at 60, down to and including the years 1897, 1898, and 1899, when the Metropolitan Traction Company was dissolved and succeeded by the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, in which period new issues of stock of $15,000,000 and $7,000,000 were made, the first issue being sold to stockholders at par, and the second at 160.

Mr. Ryan defends every step taken by the organizers, declaring that every purchase of subsidiary lines was legitimate, that there was no watered stock, that none of the so-called "insiders" ever had a dollar's interest in any of the system's contracts, and that all the stories of "millions in profits to insiders" are all absolutely false and mythical, because such profits never existed. He says that the payments of $111,000 made to Messrs. Whitney, Ryan, and others in connection with the purchase of the Wall and Cortlandt Street companies were for moneys advanced with interest.

He told the Grand Jury that the failure of the street railway companies was due to burdens of taxation put upon the company by the Legislature and courts, whereby its taxes had been almost doubled and its net earnings decreased $6,000,000 a year, or more than 10 per cent. of the company's capital stock.

MR. RYAN'S STATEMENT.

The full statement given out last night by Mr. Ryan follows:

When I appeared before the Grand Jury recently to tell what I knew about the past history and present difficulties of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, I told them that when I returned from Europe five or six months ago I had had prepared a succinct statement covering the chief features of the past history and of the present situation of this road, to the best of my knowledge and recollection, with the intention of publishing it immediately. I did not so publish it because I was informed that the matter was to be brought under official investigation and was advised that it would be improper for me to do so then.

If I had realized the extent of the misrepresentation and vilification to which I have been subjected during these five months, I doubt if I could have been deterred from making the publication; but, as I told the Grand Jury, I had not done so for the reason stated. I then submitted the statement to them and asked the privilege, which they granted, of placing it before the public. The statement submitted to the Grand Jury embodying the facts, to the best of my knowledge and belief, is as follows:

The current accusations against the former management and Directorate of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company may be summarized as follows:

1. That the stock of the company consists chiefly of "water."

2. That enormous profits were made by so-called "insiders" through construction contracts and otherwise.

3. That in the purchase by the Metropolitan Securities Company of the Wall and Cortlandt Street Railway the "insiders" appropriated $111,000 each to his personal use.

Each of these charges is false. Taking them in order:

1—Overcapitalization.

(a) In 1885 the Metropolitan Traction Company of New Jersey was formed to acquire street railways in New York. Its capital was $10,000,000; there was paid into the treasury in cash $6,000,000. Subsequently the capital was doubled and issued to the shareholders upon the same terms. Result: Total capital issued $20,000,000, representing $12,000,000 of cash paid in. The sale of the stock at 60 was wholly legitimate. It was a new venture, and subscriptions were obtained with difficulty even upon the terms offered.

(b) In 1892 the Metropolitan Traction Company of New York was formed with an authorized capital of $30,000,000. It bought all of the stock of the Metropolitan Traction Company of New Jersey, paying $120 per share in its own stock, amounting in the aggregate to $24,000,000, and sold the remaining $6,000,000 for cash at par. Result: Total capital issued, $30,000,000, representing $18,000,000 of cash paid in.

(c) In 1893 the Metropolitan Street Railway Company was formed as an operating company and acquired from the Metropolitan Traction Company the following stocks:

Chambers Street Ferry Co.	$800,000
Houston, West Street, and Pavoria Ferry Co.	6,250,000
Broadway R. R. Co.	1,000,000
South Ferry R. R. Co.	150,000
Lexington Avenue R. R. Co.	5,000,000
Metropolitan Crosstown Co.	300,000
Columbus and Ninth Avenue R. R. Co.	3,000,000
Total	$16,500,000

These stocks had been bought from time to time by the Metropolitan Traction Company directly from the original owners, and were sold by it to the new operating Metropolitan Street Railway Company for the same par amount ($16,500,000) of its own stock, which went into the treasury of the Metropolitan Traction Company. Result, so far as outstanding shares were concerned, unchanged, to wit: Total capital issued, $30,000,000, representing $18,000,000 of cash paid in.

(d) In 1896, the stock of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company was increased from $16,500,000 to $30,000,000, and the additional $13,500,000 was issued to the Metropolitan Traction Company in exchange for Broadway and Seventh Avenue and other stocks appraised at $9,000,000, and in settlement of indebtedness, amounting to $4,500,000, for construction. Result as to outstanding shares, unchanged, to wit: Total capital issued, $30,000,000, representing $18,000,000 of cash paid in.

(e) In 1897, the Metropolitan Traction Company was dissolved, in order that the shareholders might come into possession of stocks resting directly upon the properties and franchises; its assets, consisting of $30,000,000 of Metropolitan Street Railway stock and $6,000,000 of debentures, representing enhanced values of securities owned, were distributed to its stockholders, share and share alike. The traction company thereupon became extinct, and was succeeded by the Metropolitan Street Railway Company. Result: Total capital issued $30,000,000, representing $18,000,000 of cash paid in.

(f) In 1898 and 1899, $15,000,000 of new stock was sold to stockholders at par, and $6,000,000 of the proceeds was used to retire the debentures. Result: Total capital issued $45,000,000, representing $33,000,000 of cash paid in.

(g) In 1900, $7,000,000 of new stock was sold to the shareholders at 160. Result: Total capital issued, $52,000,000, representing $44,200,000 of cash paid in.

To the cash paid in should be added interest for the period during which it yielded no return in the form of dividends upon the stock which represented it. This amounted—from 1885 to 1894—to $5,040,000, thus making the total cash investment $49,240,000. From this sum, on the other hand, should be deducted $6,000,000, represented by the debentures distributed pro rata among the shareholders. This leaves $43,240,000 of actual cash investment, representing $52,000,000 of stock now outstanding, or $83.13 per share of $100 each.

2. Alleged Profits to "Insiders."

The common accusation is that many millions were made by "insiders" through construction contracts and otherwise. The cost of the Lexington Avenue franchises, property consents, construction, (first of cable and then of electric power,) equipment, &c., for example, is estimated by the critics at $2,500,000, as against which there were issued $5,000,000 of stock and $5,000,000 of bonds, thus apparently leaving a net profit to the "insiders" of $7,500,000 from this single transaction.

The facts are as follows:

(a) The Lexington Avenue & Pavonia Ferry Railroad Company was incorporated in 1893 and authorized to issue $5,000,000 of bonds and $5,000,000 of stock. The Metropolitan Traction Company contracted to construct the railway, power houses, &c., and to obtain for the Lexington Avenue Company the right to operate its cars on Twenty-third Street and Broadway, in consideration of its bond and share capital. The traction company then sold the $5,000,000 of bonds to the Central Trust Company, Guaranty Trust Company, and Mutual Life Insurance Company for par and interest. This money was paid into the treasury of the traction company and used to construct the road. Whatever of profit or loss ensued inured to the benefit or detriment of all the stockholders of the traction company, share and share alike.

The $5,000,000 of Lexington Avenue stock remained in the treasury until the Lexington Avenue Company was consolidated with the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, whose entire share capital was also owned by the Traction Company. It was then canceled.

(b) The same procedure was followed in connection with the Columbus and Ninth Avenue Company, which issued to the Traction Company $3,000,000 of bonds (also sold at par and interest) and $3,000,000 of stock, also exchanged for Metropolitan Street Railway Company stock.

Change of Form in Stock.

When the Lexington Avenue Company ($5,000,000 capital), the Columbus Avenue Company ($3,000,000 capital), and the Metropolitan Crosstown Company ($300,000 capital) were merged in the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, all of the shares of these four companies were owned by the Traction Company, and the only actual result was the extinguishment of the stock of the three merged companies and the corresponding enlargement of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company's stock to $16,500,000, which continued to remain in the treasury of the Traction Company. In other words, it was no more than a change of form in stock certificates, which could result in no loss or profit to any one, since the complete ownership was undivided. Whatever advantage or disadvantage accrued from such change in form was participated in by all of the stockholders of the Traction Company, share and share alike.

(c) Two old companies held the franchise rights to operate cars on Thirty-fourth Street. Their combined capitalization was: Stock, $1,300,000; bonds, $1,300,000. The Traction Company bought these securities from the original owners in 1894 and consolidated them into the Thirty-fourth Street Crosstown Railway Company, which issued $1,000,000 stock and $1,000,000 bonds, secured by a mortgage to the Central Trust Company, trustee. The old bonds ($1,300,000) were placed under this mortgage and are now so held by the Central Trust Company. The new $1,000,000 of bonds were sold for 105 and interest, and the proceeds went into the treasury of the Traction Company. The $1,000,000 of stock was pledged to the Guaranty Trust Company under the general mortgage of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company, and is now held by the Guaranty Trust Company, trustee.

In the process of amalgamation, there were many other precisely similar transactions, which might be recounted in detail. Those described are selected for illustration because they are the ones that have been most generally misrepresented.

"Insiders'" Profits Never Existed.

There was no increase in capitalization to the public in any instance, all of the issued shares of subordinate companies being held in the treasury of the Metropolitan Company, or pledged under mortgages and never offered for sale. The twenty-odd millions of alleged profits to "insiders," therefore, never had any existence.

At no time in the history of the company did the combined stock holdings of Messrs. Whitney, Ryan, Widener, Elkins, and Dolan amount to 25 per cent. of the total.

Neither Mr. Whitney, nor Mr. Ryan, nor Mr. Widener, nor Mr. Elkins, nor Mr. Dolan, nor Mr. Vreeland ever had a dollar of interest in any construction contract of either the Metropolitan Traction, Metropolitan Street Railway, or any subsidiary company connected with the system.

As to this transaction, the simple truth is that several hundred thousand dollars had been advanced by Messrs. Dolan, Whitney, Ryan, Widener, and Elkins to cover expenditures which had been made for the benefit of the property. The $111,000 paid to each of them in connection with the Wall and Cortlandt Street purchase was the precise amount, with interest, which each had advanced.

Not Looted, But Throttled.

The failure of the surface lines was not due to any of the causes alleged, but to conditions which were mainly the results of State interference. Among these are:

1. The extension of the free-transfer obligation by legislative enactment and court decisions, so that the fare per passenger has been reduced from 5 cents to only a little more than 3 cents.

2. Enormous increases in taxes, the special franchise tax alone having almost doubled the system's burden of taxation.

3. The extraordinary congestion of street traffic, resulting in greatly increased cost of operation and maintenance, and also in an abnormal burden of accident claims, this item alone amounting to $2,000,000 a year, or about 10 per cent. of the gross receipts.

4. The competition of subway lines, built with the aid of the city's credit.

These causes have reduced the net earnings of the system fully $6,000,000 a year, or more than 10 per cent. upon the company's capital stock.

The company was not "looted"; it was throttled.

GRAND JURY'S STATEMENT.

It Found No Evidences of Crime to Act Upon.

This is the statement of the Grand Jury upon the subject of traction conditions and their causes:

"When the Grand Jury took up the investigation of this class of crimes or alleged crimes, it was impressed with the deplorable condition of the street surface railways of this city, both on the physical and financial side. For a long time public attention had been attracted to this subject. There had been very many civil litigations, very many people had suffered severe losses, and the fiercest newspaper criticism had been directed against the persons managing and controlling the management of these railways.

"The members of the Grand Jury, while determined to discharge the duties in a judicial manner, yet as individuals, could not but feel that the physical and financial destruction of these properties was due in no inconsiderable degree, to dishonest and probably criminal acts, rather than to mistakes of judgment and lavish or reckless financiering. While much has appeared in methods and expenditures, which in the light of experience, sound business judgment would not sanction, and there were disbursements deserving severe condemnation, yet, after a prolonged and careful investigation, the Grand Jury has not been able to obtain any evidence showing the commission of a crime on which it could act."

The Grand Jury sets forth in its presentment the invitation extended to all citizens at the outset of its work to aid it in the discovery of financial crime. So far as concerned the banking situation it notes the indictments already found against William E. Montgomery, Edward R. Thomas, Orlando F. Thomas, and Charles W. Morse. In connection with traction matters, the Grand Jury presents the fact that it has received charges or suggestions from William M. Ivins, special counsel of the Public Service Commission; Herbert R. Limburg, Special Deputy Attorney General in the New York City Railway dissolution suit; Paul Fuller, attorney for an Inter-Met. stockholder who is seeking to have the merger declared illegal; Franklin Pierce, attorney for the Metropolitan Street Railway Stockholders' Committee; William F King, Chairman of this committee, and William N. Amory.

Charges Vague and Indefinite.

The majority of the charges made by these individuals are characterized by the Grand Jury as vague and indefinite. However, the topics covered by the different charges and suggestions made are summarized, together with the comments of the Grand Jury in a memorandum of thirty typewritten pages, which is made an exhibit of the presentment. This memorandum comprises the entire evidence taken in the investigation. The other exhibits accompanying the presentment comprise all of the communications which the Grand Jury received, a table showing the earnings of the surface lines for a series of years, and the tabulation of statistics on the subject of transfers which was given out in connection with the decision of Judge Lacombe cutting off the transfer exchange betwen the lines of the New York City Railway and the Third Avenue Railway Company.

A Bit of New Traction History.

The memorandum in which the Grand Jury discusses the various classes of charges made contains some new information about traction affairs that is interesting. Perhaps the most important development in this connection comes by way of explanation of an item of $28,500 paid to Thomas F. Ryan by the Metropolitan Securities Company. This was one of the unexplained payments of the Public Service Commission's investigation, and it now appears that it was a part of a very important chapter of traction history concerning which little has been known heretofore.

In the Summer of 1903, according to Wall Street history, supplemented by Mr. Ryan's testimony in the Weill suit against the New York City Railway's Directors, Mr. Ryan took up from Kuhn, Loeb & Co. the amount of Metropolitan security stock for which the bankers had subscribed on behalf of themselves and their immediate clientele on the original flotation of the Metropolitan Securities Company in 1902. It came out in the evidence taken by the Grand Jury that this block of Metropolitan Securities stock comprised the entire $6,400,000 par value subscribed by the bankers and included the original 300 full-paid shares with which the Metropolitan Securities Company had been organized.

The stock of the Securities Company in general was at that time half paid, and the explanation given to the Grand Jury of the $28,500 check was that it represented an adjustment between Mr. Ryan and the company on the 300 shares of full paid stock. It appeared further, however, that the entire block of stock taken over from Kuhn, Loeb & Co. subsequently found its way through the Metropolitan Securities Company into the treasury of the Interborough-Metropolitan Company at the same figure at which Mr. Ryan bought it, which was $90 a share. The Grand Jury did not inquire as to the conditions under which this Metropolitan Securities stock got into the Interborough-Metropolitan treasury, the reason being, according to an authoritative explanation, that this last mentioned transaction was not included in any of the charges made by individuals to the Grand Jury.

Wall and Cortlandt Street Lines.

The explanation of the transactions leading up to the Wall and Cortlandt Street ferries deals of 1902, were made by the various witnesses for the traction interests in connection with the Grand Jury's reply to one of the charges made by William N. Amory. On this subject Thomas F. Ryan, H. H. Vreeland, and all of the Directors of the Metropolitan Securities Company were called as witnesses, together with A. M Grady, who sold the Wall and Cortlandt Street Ferries Railway to Mr. Whitney, in transit to the Metropolitan Securities Company; William H. Page, an attorney concerned in the transaction, and Samuel Bixby, the nominal vendor.

The Grand Jury had available the books of Mr. Ryan, P. A. B. Widener, Thomas Dolan, and those of the estates of William C. Whitney and William L. Elkins in their search for facts in connection with the payment of $111,000 to each member of the traction quintet out of the $965,607 that the Securities Company paid for the non-existent ferries road.

Going back to the beginning of the transaction, as related to the Grand Jury, one finds the testimony of Mr. Vreeland, that prior to 1900 he had advanced from time to time moneys of the Metropolitan Street Railway, aggregating in excess of $500,000, to Mr. Whitney for purposes which the latter, who was at one time an officer or Director of the company, did not explain in detail. Mr. Vreeland understood them to be political payments. At the beginning of 1900 Mr. Vreeland was pressing to have these moneys repaid, and it was in response to these requests, according to the testimony, that Mr. Whitney asked Mr. Ryan, Mr. Dolan, Mr. Widener, and Mr. Elkins to contribute with himself $500,000. All of the checks drawn at that time went into evidence before the Grand Jury. Mr. Ryan's check for $100,000 was drawn to the order of Mr. Widener. Mr. Ryan testified to this, it appears, in the Weill suit, in the Municipal Court last week, and was incorrectly reported at that time as having said that the original $500,000 of the Metropolitan Street Railway was paid to Mr. Whitney.

Mr. Whitney Got the Checks.

The checks of Mr. Widener, Mr. Dolan, and Mr. Elkins, in evidence before the Grand Jury, were all made payable to Mr. Whitney. The reason why Mr. Ryan should have made his check payable to Mr. Widener while the Philadelphia contingent made their checks all payable to Mr. Whitney was not stated to the Grand Jury. At any event, the checks were all turned over to Mr. Whitney, who arranged through the firm of George C. Huhne & Co. of Philadelphia to have their proceeds forwarded to Mr. Vreeland and credited to the Metropolitan Street Railway. At the same time 3,500 shares of Electric Storage Battery stock was turned over to Huhne & Co. and its proceeds sent to Mr. Vreeland for the account of the street railway, thus closing out the obligation incurred originally at Mr. Whitney's direction.

In this shape matters stood until the Wall and Cortlandt Street Ferries transaction. The details of the repayments, as told to the Grand Jury, did not differ appreciably from those which were given before the Public Service Commission last Fall. Mr. Ryan, who was not a witness before the Public Service Commission, testified that he was out of the State at the time that Mr. Whitney arranged for the Wall and Cortlandt Street Ferries payment, and that his particular $111,000 check was received by his secretary in his absence. On his return, said Mr. Ryan, his secretary told him that such a check had been received from Mr. Brady, and Mr. Ryan thought nothing more of the matter because, as he explained, he and Mr. Brady were constantly in stock deals with each other and sending checks for large amounts back and forth.

Mr. Ryan had been elected to the Board of the Metropolitan Securities Company when this payment for the Wall and Cortlandt Street Ferries Road came up for approval as a part of a lump payment of about $2,000,000. But he had not qualified at that time, and testified that the first meeting which he attended was in August, 1902. In this chain of circumstances the Grand Jury was able to find nothing suggesting that anything unlawful had been committed.

Light on Political Payments.

The Grand Jury got some interesting light on the subject of political payments, however, despite the fact that much of the money believed to have been used for this purpose could be told of in detail only by Mr. Whitney. It did come out in the testimony that on a given day during the political campaign of 1903 twenty $1,000 bills were sent by Lemuel Ely Quigg, as a messenger, to Benjamin B. Odell, then Chairman of the State Committee. At the same time that Mr. Quigg started for Republican State Headquarters with the Odell money, another messenger, whose name is yet unknown, was dispatched with an envelope containing $16,700 for Tammany Hall.

It was testified that Mr. Ryan, Mr. Vreeland, and Mr. Cravath had a conference on this subject and that Mr. Ryan was disposed to favor the contributions, while Mr. Cravath was disposed to doubt whether the company got its money's worth through such expenditure. It was held by the Grand Jury that the decision of the courts in the Perkins case made it impossible to attach any criminality to these two payments. In the Perkins case it was held that the contribution made by the New York Life to the Republican National Committee was for the benefit of the company, because the Directors believed that the interests of the New York Life as a great investitng institution would be promoted by the success of the Republican Party and its policies of sound money and protection.

When explanation was sought yesterday afternoon as to how this theory could be applied to a case in which payments were made to both political parties at the same time, it was explained that the Republican Party was at that time in control of the State organization, whereas, Tammany Hall was in control of the City Government, and it might easily be believed that Republican principles were for the benefit of the street railway in matters of State administration, whereas, Democratic principles were equally advantageous in purely municipal activities.

In fact, it is understood that the Grand Jury was advised that contributions made to both parties in a purely municipal campaign on the same day would still come within the scope of the Perkins decision, upon the ground that their makers, as officers or Directors of a corporation, might believe that they were promoting its interests by standing in with the winning side, whichever way the election might be determined.

Mr. Vreeland's Disbursements.

The check of $37,492.56 with which the Metropolitan Securities Company eventually assumed these two payments, with interest, on April 22, 1904, was one of a list of checks submitted to the Grand Jury by William M. Ivins as having been turned up, but left unexplained, in the traction investigation of the Public Service Commission. This list included a series of checks aggregating $22,000, payable to H. H. Vreeland, over a series of five years, and explained to the Grand Jury as representing the unvouchered "petty cash" disbursements of the President's office.

The Grand Jury thought this was a moderate sum to be so disbursed by a man in Mr. Vreeland's position, and had no fault to find. Two other checks—one of $7,500 and one of $6,666—charged to construction, were found to be used as a "secret service fund." With these the Grand Jury had no quarrel. In Mr. Ivins's list there was a check for $40,000 and another for $5,000, showing payments of the Metropolitan Securities money shortly after the Wall and Cortlandt Street Ferries transaction. Mr. Vreeland testified that these payments were allowed by him because William C. Whitney told him that there were items to be cleared up in the amounts stated in connection with the Wall and Cortlandt Street Ferries Railway. That was all Mr. Vreeland knew about it.

The Grand Jury also found that in the Fall of 1902 Mr. Whitney had obtained from Mr. Vreeland out of the funds of the Interurban Street Railway Company, $60,000, for supposedly political purposes, which he did not explain. This money was refunded by the Metropolitan Securities Company the next year. It was in 1902 that Justice Vernon M. Davis of the Supreme Court was elected to the bench.

In the investigation into the charges filed by the King committee against District Attorney Jerome, a former investigator of the Metropolitan Street Railway named Julian testified that he was an agent in obtaining a contribution for $15,000 of Metropolitan money for Justice Davis's campaign fund. Mr. Ryan was asked when he testified if he knew whether any of the $60,000 obtained from Mr. Vreeland by Mr. Whitney went for this purpose. Mr. Ryan did not know of any such expenditure.

$150,000 Payment to McDonald.

One of the suggestions made by Paul Fuller as affording possibly an interesting subject of inquiry for the Grand Jury was the payment to John B. McDonald out of the funds of the Metropolitan Securities Company of $150,000 as consideration for the abrogation of contracts which Mr. McDonald had made with the Ryan Subway Building Syndicate, formed late in 1903. This matter was touched upon by the Public Service Commission. The testimony before the Grand Jury showed that this syndicate, made up of Mr. Ryan, Mr. Brady, Mr. Widener, Mr. Elkins, and others, contracted with Mr. McDonald to build a subway as the first step of the war on the Belmont interests that led up to the Interborough-Metropolitan merger.

While the contract of the syndicate was between Mr. McDonald and a company of individuals, the payment to him of the money of the Metropolitan Securities Company was justified before the Grand Jury on the theory that the Metropolitan Securities Company became thereby released from a contract which it had made with Mr. McDonald at the beginning of the transaction. This contract bound the Metropolitan Securities Company to exchange transfers between the lines in its control and the lines of any subway which might be constructed by the syndicate of which Mr. McDonald was the active man. The explanation was satisfactory to the Grand Jury.

Both Mr. Amory and Mr. Limburg submitted charges relating to the bookkeeping transactions by which a discount of $4,500,000 on the notes of the Interurban Street Railway, issued in 1902, were created "an asset" of that company by charging it to construction. Mr. Amory specifically declared that perjury had been committed by the officers who swore to the correctness of the reports in which this item of construction appeared. In this connection it came out that the expert accounting advice, of which Mr. Jerome and the Grand Jury had the benefit in this investigation, was that of Charles A. Ludlam, formerly of Haskins & Sells, who has been in charge of the accounting work of the surface railways for a number of years, and Charles Teale. Mr. Teale was the accountant who dismissed the charges previously brought against the Metropolitan by William N. Amory in 1903.

Mr. Amory also included in his recent charges before the Grand Jury the declaration that perjury had been committed, as shown by false and conflicting statements in the reports of the traction companies to the State Railway Commission. On the advice of the two accountants mentioned the Grand Jury held that perjury could not be committed in the premises because the reports were verified "upon information and belief" that the figures they contained were those shown in the books of the company.

This the Grand Jury found to be probably the fact, so far as the State Railway Commission reports were concerned. The Grand Jury found that they were made up according to the schedules prepared by the State Railway Commission, which it declared might not, perhaps, show the true condition of affairs of the company as clearly as could be desired.

SUIT AGAINST MET. DIRECTORS.

Plaintiff's Attorney Says Stock Was Lent Out to be Traded on the Curb.

Only a half day's session was held yesterday in the suit brought in the Municipal Court by Emanuel Weill and Minnie Weiler against the Directors of the New York City Railway to recover losses on stock held by the complainants by reason of statements of the company.

The examination of H. H. Vreeland, President of the Metropolitan and New York City Railways, was to have been continued yesterday, but Mr. Vreeland was unable to attend, and the attorney for the complainants spent the morning in putting in documentary evidence. This included one section of the minutes of the Directors of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company that may lead to important disclosures.

It appeared that on March 23, 1899, a contract was made with the American Air Power Company. Mr. Kramer said that the Metropolitan Street Railway owned $1,250,000 of the stock of this company, and that he expected to prove that this stock was lent to various Directors who sold it on the curb and then bought it back at lower figures, transferring it again to the Metropolitan Street Railway, after the individual profits had been reaped.

The case was adjourned until next Monday morning.

BATONYI REPLEVINS PROPERTY WIFE HELD

Goes with Deputy Sheriff to Newport Farm and Points Out Stable Belongings.

BARRED FROM THE HOUSE

Declares Wife Would Return Articles He Claims, but Is Not Permitted by Others to Do So.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, April 20.—Aurel Batonyi, accompanied by Deputy Sheriff Frank De Blois and armed with a writ of replevin, to-day went to Two Mile Corner Farm, near Middletown, which his wife owns, to get possession of certain property which he alleges Mrs. Batonyi has withheld against his protest since the starting of her suit for divorce and his countersuit.

When the Batonyis separated in August, Mr. Batonyi says, he left many of his personal possessions at Two Mile Corner Farm. Out of the twenty-six horses on the farm he claims eight; also much harness, a number of carriages, a safe containing personal papers, and articles of personal use.

The Deputy Sheriff had to make two visits to the farm, the second with reinforcements, and then he only got possession of such articles as were not kept in the house. Especially did Mr. Batonyi want his safe, but as the house was closed the officers would have had to break in to get at it. They did not have authority to do this.

When recently Mr. Batonyi found he had need of the property he had left at his wife's farm he wrote to her agents asking that it be turned over to him. His letters were not answered, he says, and so he got out the writ of replevin.

On his first visit the Deputy Sheriff went alone. Mrs. Batonyi's employes declared they had orders to prevent any one coming on the place. So the Deputy Sheriff retired. Later in the day he returned with a force from the office here. With this party went Mr. Batonyi to identify his property.

He didn't find all he sought, and it is charged that some of it was taken away after notice was recently served on Mrs. Batonyi by publication of the application for the writ. The Deputy Sheriff warned A. O. D. Taylor, Jr., Mrs. Batonyi's agent, that he would be held responsible for the removal of any property.

Mr. Batonyi declares that he made demands for his property to Mrs. Batonyi, Frank K. Sturgis, the lawyer, and to Frank Work, Mrs. Batonyi's father.

Mr. Batonyi said to-night: "All this is a great pity. I stated in Newport last November, and I repeat it now, that it is an outrage that man and wife should be obliged to throw mud at each other to satisfy certain persons.

"I know my wife would return my belongings, but I believe she is not permitted to, as those persons wish to see us fight. I have nothing to say otherwise. In consequence of not being able to get my property, I had to start to-day's unfortunate proceedings, which would otherwise have been uncalled for."

Mr. Batonyi's coach Good Times, which ran from the Waldorf-Astoria for some years as a public coach, is being shipped to the Francis Farm, where he is in possession of his property taken from the Two-Mile Corner Farm to-day.

On the application of Morris Cukor, counsel for Aurel Batonyi, who is being sued by his wife, Mrs. Burke-Roche Batonyi, for divorce, Supreme Court Justice Dowling allowed Mr. Batonyi yesterday to be relieved of certain stipulations made by his former counsel.

Allegations against his wife made by Batonyi in the divorce proceedings were withdrawn by him on March 11 last by permission of Justice O'Gorman after the publication of what purported to be his answer. The papers in the suit are kept secret.

BRYAN COMES HERE ON PEACE MISSION

convinced that President Roosevelt will not accept a renomination. I believe that if the convention at Chicago should be stampeded for him he would insist that it be called together again to nominate another man. Of the general situation I would say that the Republicans are as badly off as we are. We are both trading eggs, and some of the eggs are bad."

In the course of other interviews during the day Mr. Bryan took occasion to deny that he left the instruction or non-instruction of the delegates from this State to Chairman Conners; to deny that his talks with politicians up the State were any more than just friendly chats; to deny that his being in town at this time had anything to do with the recent State Convention, and to assert that the newspapers generally misquoted and misrepresented him.

Among those who saw Mr. Bryan during the day were Urey Woodson of Kentucky, Norman E. Mack of Buffalo, Charles F. Rattigan of Auburn, and W. G. Conrad of Montana. Somebody about the hotel surmised that Mr. Conrad was to be the Nebraskan's choice of a running mate if he got the nomination.

Mr. Woodson talked reassuringly with Mr. Bryan about the situation in Kentucky, and Mr. Mack discussed with him the recent State Convention. Mr. Mack says the situation up the State is such that if primaries were held now the forces that controlled the State Convention would be buried under an avalanche of ballots. Last night, however, he did not seem to think very much of the prospects for an anti-snap convention. Mr. Bryan is known to strongly oppose the sending of a contesting delegation from this State to the National Convention.

Nixon a Peace Messenger.

The politicians who frequent the Hoffman House regarded it as probable that Mr. Nixon's visit to Mr. Bryan terminated the internal strife in the party. It was believed that Mr. Bryan, through his influence with Mr. Mack and other up-State leaders, would bring about at least a degree of harmony that would insure there being no opposition to the Conners-Murphy State ticket, which is to be named in the Fall. It is the State ticket that Conners and Murphy are anxious about, and they would be perfectly willing to support Mr. Bryan with the State delegation, if they could be assured a free field in the State. They think, too, that Mr. Bryan can carry New York State against Taft, and would carry the Democratic State ticket in with him.

Mr. Bryan will leave this morning for Trenton, where he will have a conference with the Democratic editors of that State, and will afterward lunch with Gov. Fort and other State officials. He will also meet Frank L. Katzenbach, who ran against Gov. Fort. In the afternoon he will address a public meeting at the Taylor Opera House, returning to this city about 5 o'clock.

To-night the Nebraskan will speak at Cooper Union, and will also address the annual dinner of the Missouri Society at the New Grand Hotel. He will remain at the Hoffman all day to-morrow, and to-morrow night will speak at the dinner of The Associated Press.

TAKING EVIDENCE IN RECOUNT TRIAL

TELLS OF GUARDING VOTES

Mayor Rests on Election Certificate—Hearst Alleges Frauds in All Election Districts.

The actual trial of the case of the People vs. George B. McClellan, with William R. Heart impleading, popularly known as the Hearst recount case, the outcome of which is expected to prove who was elected Mayor of New York in November, 1905, began yesterday, not, however, before two jurors had been excused of the twelve chosen to pass upon the case and their places filled by the selection of two others. When court opened the attorneys for Mayor McClellan and Mr. Hearst had a conference with Justice Lambert concerning the advisability of withdrawing the two jurymen. With the consent of the Justice it was finally agreed that Frederick Masten ,the foreman, of 230 West Ninety-fifth Street, and George M. Yandle of 2,463 Davidson Avenue, the Bronx, Juror No. 12, should be excused.

A new foreman in place of Mr. Masten was quickly found in the person of James V. Vader, a retired manufacturer of 303 West 102d Street. The next two talesmen examined were excused for cause, and D. Le Roy Cleveland, a real estate agent, of 555 West 144th Street, was drawn.

"Are you related to former President Grover Cleveland?" Mr. Shearn asked.

"I don't think so. You might ask Mr. De Truax, who is a genealogical expert and the editor of the House of Truax," answered Mr. Cleveland, looking at Mr. De Truax, who is Juror No. 11.

Mr. Cleveland was accepted as the twelfth juror and Mr. Richards, of counsel for Mayor McClellan, began his opening address to the jury. He had not said a dozen words, however, before he was interrupted by ex-Deputy Attorney General Dolson, who said that the Mayor in his answer had failed to allege affirmatively his title to the office, and that a judgment of ouster on the pleading be entered. Justice Lambert allowed Mr. Richards to amend his answer and the trial started off in earnest.

Opening Speech for McClellan.

"This action," said Mr. Richards, "is brought by the Attorney General, and is, as you have heard it called, an act in quo warranto, that is, an act by the people of the State, who say to Mayor McClellan, 'Mr. Mayor, by what right do you hold the office of Mayor of the City of New York?' We answer that he holds that office by right of the Constitution and the law of elections.

"Briefly, what does the election law provide. It provides for bi-partisan Boards of Election, two Republican and two Democratic members, or two members each of the two dominant parties at the last election. It provides for Inspectors of Election and ballot clerks, and permits each party and each candidate to have two watchers, who are also permitted to remain during the count of the votes.

"With 1,948 election districts, it will appear that 40,000 men were engaged as officials in the election of November, 1905. The law provides that when the certificates of the various election districts have been filed the Board of Canvassers shall canvass the ballots and announce who has been elected. Now, with these requirements in force—I am not saying whether Mr. Hearst availed himself of them or not, but there they were—there was all the protection of that machinery at his service.

"The Board of Elections, by authority of law, issued a certificate of election to George B. McClellan, showing that he was elected Mayor for a term of four years.

"The Attorney General has alleged in this case that frauds were committed in each and every election district in the city and that men who were not entitled to vote did vote. They come in here with this charge against 40,000 citizens of New York."

Mr. Richards then offered in evidence the Mayor's certificate of election and oath of office, and the Mayor's case rested.

Attorney General Jackson then made the opening address for the People.

The Claims of the People.

"You know the nature and purpose of this action," said the Attorney General, "and I shall not trespass on your time by telling you about the struggle of the last three years, through two Legislatures, to arrive at this moment, when the ballot boxes may be opened and the truth of the election of 1905 ascertained. All that the people demand is the truth. We approach this issue with no prejudice, but only a desire for a fair count.

"We claim that fraud and errors sufficient to change the result of that election occurred, and we shall rely upon the ballots to determine that question. The difference between the announced votes of the leading candidates was only 3,474, and an average of only one vote in each election district is needed to change that result. I will call to your attention that the law provides for Inspectors for only two parties, which in this case was for the Republican and the Democratic Party."

John R. Voorhis, who was President of the Board of Elections at the time of the election of 1905, was the first witness called by the Attorney General. Ex-Deputy Attorney General Dolson did the questioning.

Mr. Voorhis testified at length about the events immediately following the election and the disposition made of the ballot boxes, which were so unceremoniously hauled to the office of the Board of Elections on the morning of the second day following the election, where they remained until a Supreme Court Justice issued an order to the board to receive and care for them. Mr. Voorhis first told what had been done with the boxes in Manhattan. One-third of these boxes, he said, were stored in a room on West Forty-first Street, where the board had its office; another third was stored in Mott Street, and the last third in a building on East Sixty-first Street, near Second Avenue.

How the Boxes Were Guarded.

"How were these boxes made secure from being tampered with," asked Mr. Dolson.

"Police and civilians watched them all the time until they were finally removed to the Manhattan Storage Warehouse at Seventh Avenue and Fifty-third Street," answered Mr. Voorhis.

"What was done to make them secure there?"

"The iron door was locked and a seal placed upon it, and that door could not have been opened without its seal being broken."

"Did you regularly inspect the warehouse to see that the room that the boxes were kept in, was not tampered with, and the seal on the door remained intact?"

"I did, and I found that neither of those things had happened."

"Did you see the boxes after the election."

"I did."

"Did you notice that any of the labels that covered the holes through which the ballots are dropped were broken."

"No labels, as far as I was able to ascertain, had been broken, except in the case of a box that fell off of a wagon and was broken. That box was picked up and the ballots that had fallen out placed in another box, which was attached to the original box, and the circumstances of the incident noted."

Mr. Voorhis said that the same procedure had been followed in the Boroughs of Brooklyn, Queens, the Bronx, and Richmond, as in Manhattan, to preserve the boxes and ballots in exactly the same condition they were when the votes were counted on the night of election

Mr. Voorhis was still on the stand when court adjourned at 4:30 o'clock. The trial will be resumed at 10:30 A. M. to-day.

Cragin, to serve until April, 1911, vice Henry W. Sackett, resigned; and E. W. Bloomingdale, to serve until April, 1912, vice Alexander Caldwell, deceased.

MILLION WILL, COURT PUZZLE.

Executors Cannot Interpret the Phraseology of E. Walter's Document.

Justice McCall, sitting in Trial Term, Part III. of the Supreme Court, will be called upon in a few days to determine the meaning to be placed on the phraseology of one of the most unusual wills ever presented to a court for construction. Emmanuel Walter, the testator, a former wealthy merchant of San Francisco, in dividing up an estate of a million and a half dollars, made possible so many misunderstandings that his two brothers, who were appointed executors, have been obliged to lay the entire will before the court for interpretation.

One of the most interesting points is the creation of a residue fund, which it is believed will amount to more than $900,000, for the "support of needy relatives to the sixth degree." The claims of the "needy" ones are to be determined by the executors, the will says, and provided for out of the interest of the fund. At the end of fifty years the unexpended interest is to be added to the principal and the fund divided "among the claimants to the sixth degree."

The executors argue that before the time for the division arrives they and the majority of those who will lawfully become receivers of the bequests will be dead. They want the court to tell them what they are going to do about this.

There are also other points of contention, among them determining which of the two museums of San Francisco Mr. Walter meant when he left his $50,000 art collection and $50,000 for its maintenance to the "Art Museum of San Francisco." This is the official name of neither of them and both have laid claim to it.

Moritz and Isaac Walter, the executors, have taken the case into court by bringing suit against all the many claimants under the many clauses of the will. The defendants number twenty-five, not including the relatives which come under the head of the "to the sixth degree" clause.

There is a fund of $5,000 left to Max Hessberg to be "expended for the aid and assistance of the needy relatives of my mother." Hessberg was a merchant of this city and a close friend of Mr. Walter. He died soon after the latter and his executors also want instructions.

YOUNG GOULD'S WIFE TO BEGIN NEW SUIT

Papers Were Served on Husband Thursday in Original Action for Separation.

NO HOPE OF AMITY NOW

Relatives and Friends of Both Realize That Reconciliation Is Impossible.

Hopes for a reconciliation between Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jay Gould have been practically abandoned both by the relatives of Mr. Gould, who is in Hot Springs, Va., and of Mrs. Gould, who is at her Fifth Avenue home. It was learned yesterday that summons and complaint were served in an action for separation on Mr. Gould last Thursday in the Plaza Hotel. This allows the defendant twenty days in which to file his answer.

So far, Mr. Gould's lawyer, De Lancey Nicoll, has not appeared in court, and there is good authority for the statement that still another action will be filed against Mr. Gould before the expiration of the twenty days. Pending new developments, the affairs of the young pair will rest. Mr. Gould is expected to return before the end of the week.

Yesterday Henry L. Sprague, Mrs. Gould's lawyer, denied various published statements attributed to Mrs. Gould. When seen at the Knickerbocker Club, Mr. Sprague said:

"You can deny with emphasis that Mrs. Gould has made any statement for publication except one brief note which she sent to a reporter on Saturday. The note was sent under great stress of mind and referred to the attitude of certain newspapers in causing trouble in her household. In no way has she referred to the matter of her own affairs, and absurd comments purporting to be interviews with Mrs. Gould are mere fabrications. Nor have I discussed this case in any way, and my policy of silence shall remain unchanged."

Friends of Mr. Gould say that he will return shortly to consult his lawyer. Mr. Gould, it is said, realizes the improbability of an amicable adjustment, and the only future controversy between the parents, it is said, is likely to be in regard to the disposition of the children.

Meanwhile, young Mrs. Gould remains secluded in her Fifth Avenue home with her children. Her mother, Mrs. Edward Kelly, is constantly with her.

Mrs. Gould's complaint in her suit for separation alleges desertion, and Mr. Gould's departure last week from the Fifth Avenue home to the Plaza is supposed to substantiate this charge.

A mutual friend of Mr. and Mrs. Gould said yesterday:

"All efforts to establish a reconciliation have failed, and the separation has caused the greatest sorrow to Mrs. Gould's friends. However, she has considered carefully and has not proceeded too impulsively. The picture of the young mother with her two litle daughters in that great home has evoked the most sincere sympathy from every one who knows the family. The very impossibility of restoring amicable relations makes the case doubly sad. Although the chief trouble is incompatibility, the breach cannot be spanned."

COL. JAY FAVORS RACING.

Says the Governor in His Crusade Is Bigoted and Narrow.

Col. William Jay, in his opening remarks as presiding officer at the dinner of the St. Nicholas Society last night at Delmonico's, referred to Gov. Hughes's opposition to racing as bigoted and narrow, and stated that all citizens of Dutch descent, while respecting the Governor and holding him in the highest regard, could not but regret his attitude in the present instance.

"The Governor is a good man—a very good man, but I think that in this he is a little narrow. He is a Christian, and a very good one, but a member of a branch of the Christian church which is not as broad as some. In fact, he is a Baptist."

There were made political references in a light vein during the different speeches, and Adrian H. Joline, one of the receivers of the New York City Railway, in a sarcastic speech on "New York, the Greatest City of the Universe," took up the traction situation and said that he wished the Public Service Commission would give the receivers a little assistance once in a while instead of "hindering us all the time."

Two hundred men, the majority of them well-known, were present at the dinner. The festivities opened by Col. Jay rising at the centre of the speakers' dais in cocked hat and elaborate regalia and being presented with the rooster and weather vane which adorned the first City Hall of Colonial days. This was borne into the dining hall by a retinue of colored servants dressed in old gold and blue doublet and knickerbockers, followed by the Stewards of the society. Before the speaking began long Dutch pipes had been distributed and were being puffed merrily by the diners.

Among those present were John W. Aitken, Col. George Anderson, Joseph H. Auerbach, William Baylis, Henry R. Beekman, Clarence W. Bowen, John C. Breckinridge, Charles M. Cannon, Col. A. R. Chisholm, George H. Coutts, David S. Cooles, John F. Daniell, Justice Vernon M. Davis, H. B. Dominick, Lawrence B. Elliman, Stuyvesant Fish, Austen G. Fox, Frederic de P. Foster, Frederic Gallatin, George Gibbs, Orlando H. Harriman, William Y. Hawley, Gen. Thomas L. James, Oliver Livingston Jones, Smith E. Lane, Francis M. Leake, John G. McCullogh, Joseph Milbank, Gen. William F. Morriss, Col. Norris G. Osborn of New Haven, who also spoke; Howland Pell, Gen. Frederick C. Pierson, John R. Planten, Charles Pryer, James Quinlan, Frederic W. Rhinelander, Gen. E. H. Ripley, Charles A. and Alfred E. Schermerhorn, Clarence J. Shearn, Dr. Frederick H. Sykes of Columbia University, Frank R. Van Nest, James B. Van Woert, John R. Van Wormer, Dr. Harmon A. Vedder, Col. Alfred Wagstaff, and John C. Westervelt.

GILCHRIST CALLED TRAITOR.

Constituents in Mass Meeting Denounce Senator for Gambling Vote.

More than 1,000 persons, residents of the Tenth Senatorial District of Brooklyn, and the majority of them members of St. Clement's or other churches, met last night in Somer's Hall, East New York, to protest against the action of the Senate in defeating the Anti-Race Track Gambling bills.

Senator Alfred J. Gilchrist, representing the district, was called a traitor to his constituents, and his action in voting against the bill was stigmatized as a menace to the community. Senator Gilchrist did not attend the meeting, though he was invited to explain his vote. Canon Chase said the Senator was afraid to come.

A. A. Gray of the Beecher Memorial Church offered the resolutions denouncing Senator Gilchrist as a traitor and calling upon him to change his vote if such a thing were possible. The resolutions were unanimously adopted. Others who spoke in denunciation of the Senator were Frank Moss of the Anti-Vice Society, ex-Senator Griswold, and ex-Congressman Baker.

Senator Gilchrist sent a letter to the Rev. Floyd Appleton, rector of St. Clement's Church, saying he did not care to address an audience whose minds had been set by hearing but one side of the question.

The Senator declared that the real peril was the poolrooms and not the race tracks, and that the Agnew-Hart bills would encourage and spread the poolroom evil.

NO CAUCUS ON RACING BILLS.

Raines Not to Call One—Explains His Attitude on the Bills.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 20.—State Senator John Raines, majority leader, said to-night that he would not call a caucus of the Republican majority on the anti-gambling bills.

"Nor will the Governor ask me to do so," he added. "I think a caucus would not do much good in this case. I don't think a majority can be brought into line for these bills."

He said he would welcome the prospective Senator from the Forty-seventh Senatorial District, and thought he would be promptly seated.

Senator Raines to-night explained that he had consented to the bills going over for a week only after several Republican Senators, whose votes were essential to the success of the bills, had declared that it would be impossible for them, on account of caucuses and conventions in their districts, to attend the sessions on the following Monday night or Tuesday.

BAR ON RING TO TRAINERS.

Restriction on Horsemen Reported as Approved by Track Managers.

A report in circulation at the Aqueduct race course yesterday to the effect that The Jockey Club and race track managers had agreed on a track regulation barring trainers from the betting ring, as jockeys now are barred, caused much excited discussion among the professional horsemen.

According to the report, the order concerning the trainers is to be issued within a very short time, as it was said that the Stewards of The Jockey Club already had acted on the matter, with the approval of the managers of the race tracks, and had decided that the presence in the betting ring of the men responsible for the condition of the horses running in the races was harmful to the interests of the sport and an evil that called for reform.

The majority of the horsemen, owners, and trainers refused to credit the reports.

MURPHY ON McCARREN.

Proxy May Put Him on State Committee, but Not on Committee of Twelve.

Charles F. Murphy spent the larger part of yesterday and last evening at Tammany Hall.. He said there was no prospect of the State Committee meeting again soon. He admitted that it was quite possible for Conrad Hasenflug to give Senator McCarren a proxy, entitling the Senator to a seat in the State Committee, from which Murphy and Connors have ousted him, but declared that Mr. Hasenflug would not be permitted to delegate to McCarren the right to act as one of the committee of twelve, which is to reorganize the machine in Kings County.

"A man cannot delegate his powers, and McCarren knows it," said Mr. Murphy, sharply.

The Tammany leader was asked whether it was true that to further humiliate McCarren, he and Chairman Conners were using their influence to obtain the passage of the race-track gambling bills through the Legislature.

"Democratic Senators will continue to vote as they please without dictation from Tammany Hall," was the reply.

Mr. Murphy said also that there was no disposition on the part of any one to displace Norman E. Mack as National Committeeman from this State.

TO GET LINE ON HUGHES MEN.

Delegates Are Called for a Conference to Solidify Governor's Forces.

An attempt will be made on April 30 to solidify the Hughes forces in this State, when a considerable number of the delegates to the National Convention at Chicago will meet in the Manhattan Hotel and discuss plans for carrying the Hughes boom to Chicago and keeping it intact.

Stewart L. Woodford, Seth Low, and Frederick R. Hazard, delegates at large, have sent out a call for the conference.

It is understood that there is no expectation that all the delegates will attend the meeting. The aim is rather to get a line on who are really Hughes men and who are not, so that the delegates at large in general, and Stewart L. Woodford in particular, will be able to ascertain what the exact strength of the Hughes forces will be when the convention meets.

AGENTS OF TRADE HURT US IN ORIENT

Secretary Taft Says the Missionaries Are Not the Real Trouble Makers.

SOME BAD MEN SENT THERE

Roman Catholic Church Has Done Good in Philippines—Help the Missionary Work.

Introduced as the Secretary of Peace, Secretary of War William H. Taft last night addressed an audience which filled Carnegie Hall at a meeting held under the auspices of the Laymen's Missionary Movement.

The Secretary was greeted with such prolonged applause that he tried in vain several times to start his speech. He was, finally, able to get under way with an address on "Christianity in the Far East," embodying first-hand knowledge of conditions in the Orient.

Secretary Taft's address was in the nature of a strong defense of the missionary abroad and in a striking passage, in which he endeavored to remove from the missionaries the onus of having caused international troubles, he laid the blame for much dislike of the West by the East on the shoulders of the advance agents of Western business concerns.

"Western civilization is, in trade," he said, "pressing into the Orient, and its agents ahead of the trade are not always the best representatives of Western civilization. There are in this set of advance agents many who left the West for the good of the West and because their history might prove embarrassing to them at home."

Secretary Taft referred to the attempt made in Shanghai to have Judge Wilfley removed from the American court there. He said that Judge Wilfley had served as Attorney General in the Philippines and that when he went to Shanghai he found a nest of immorality. His task, he said, was to clean out an Augean stable, and when he got through the immorality that had flourished under the flag was cleaned out.

"It was said that the Boxer war was the result of the meddling of missionaries. That is not true. The first outbreak was against the missionaries because they were the furthest in the country and the easiest to attack. But the attack was against foreign interference, and the Orientals had come to look upon us all as sitting, waiting for the slicing up of the Chinese Empire. They thought we were all waiting for our piece of pork. I am not prepared to say—"

The Secretary indulged in a long pause.

"I am not prepared to say," he repeated at last, "that there was no ground for this suspicion."

The Secretary of War got a good round of applause for this declaration, and a laugh went with it.

"Until I went to the Orient," he continued, "I did not realize the immense importance of foreign missions. We've got to wake up in this country. We are not the only people. We are not all there is in the world. There are lots of other people waiting for our endeavor, for our help, and our sacrifices. Christianity and the spread of it is the only basis for our hope of civilization. We are dependent upon Christianity in any hope we may have for uplifting the peoples thrust upon us.

"The only people who are Christians in the Orient are those of the Philippines. The old Mission Fathers kept them in a state of ignorance, perhaps, but nevertheless they kept them Christians. Their ideals are Christian ideals. They are fit material to make a self-governing people in two or three generations. My conviction is that our nation is just as much charged to help the unfortunate cast upon us as the wealthy of a community are to help the unfortunate in that community. It is said that there is nothing in the Constitution to permit this. There is nothing against it.

"We went into the Cuban war because there was an international scandal in which we seemed to share. We have the Philippines and the hope of the Philippines is in the spread of the churches. One discouraging thing there is the poverty of the Roman Catholic Church. Roman Catholic or not, a man cannot but hope to see the Church better off there. It is not a question of which Church spreads Christianity. There should be a competition between them to spread it. The influence of the Roman Catholic Church in the Philippines upheld the hands of the civil Governor of the islands. I am talking practical facts about the effect of religion on political government, and I know what I am talking about. The work of foreign missions should be pressed forward."

Before Secretary Taft spoke addresses were made by John R. Mott, presiding; Silas McBee, the editor of The Churchman; Samuel B. Cappen of Boston, and J. Campbell White. After the meeting a great part of the audience insisted on climbing on the stage and shaking the hand of the Secretary of War.

COHALAN GRAND SACHEM.

Murphy's Chief Lieutenant in Convention to Succeed Bourke Cockran.

Daniel F. Colahan, who was Charles F. Murphy's chief lieutenant prior to and at the recent Democratic State Convention, is to succeed Bourke Cockran as Grand Sachem of the Tammany Society. The annual election of officers of the society was held last night at the Wigwam, and Thomas E. Rush was elected to succeed Mr. Colahan on the Board of Sachems.

The Grand Sachem is never elected from the membership of the Board of Sachems, and the action of last night clearly indicates that Mr. Colahan is to succeed Mr. Cockran.

Other new members of the board elected last night were Julius Harburger, in place of the late Randolph Guggenheimer; Thomas F. McAvoy, in place of the late Daniel F. McMahon, and George W. Loft, in place of the late Patrick Keenan. Mr. Colahan will be elected Grand Sachem about May 20.

MAY SPLIT ON TAFT.

New Hampshire Committee Will Oppose Convention's Declaration for Him.

CONCORD, N. H., April 20.—A feeling of uncertainty prevailed to-night regarding the outcome of the Republican State Convention to-morrow. While the majority of the delegates appear to be desirous of a harmonious meeting, it is recognized that a lively discussion will arise in case resolutions in favor of any Presidential candidate are introduced. It is generally expected that the delegates at large will be United States Senator Jacob H. Gallinger of Concord, ex-Gov. Chester B. Jordan of Lancaster, Attorney General Edwin G. Eastman of Exeter, and Edwin F. Jones of Manchester.

If a contest arises as a result of differences of opinion as to indorsing any Presidential candidate, the names of ex-United States Senator William E. Chandler, United States Senator Henry E. Burnham, ex-Gov. Frank W. Rollins, and Winston Churchill have been mentioned as possible contestants.

Ex-Gov. Rollins has made the suggestion that the convention might possibly be asked to adopt a resolution expressing a preference for Secretary Taft. Senator Gallinger, who is Chairman of the State Committee, has announced his intention of firmly opposing any such action by the convention.

Gray Not to Attend Johnson Banquet.

Special to The New York Times.

Cake Beats Senator Fulton by 2,500.

PORTLAND, Ore., April 20.—In the Republican primary election Henry M. Cake has carried the State for United States Senator over Senator Charles W. Fulton by about 2,500 majority.

RUSSIAN SOLDIERS IN PERIL IN PERSIA

Force Sent Across Frontier to Punish Kurds Menaced by Big Body of Brigands.

COMMANDER ASKS FOR HELP

Anxiety in Foreign Office at St. Petersburg—Feared Russian Kurds May Join with Persian Kindred.

TIFLIS, April 20.—An alarming report has just been received here setting forth the critical situation of a small Russian expeditionary force in Persia, which is menaced by a vastly superior body of Persian brigands.

The Russian commander of the force that is in trouble has sent out a messenger demanding reinforcements of infantry, artillery, and cavalry.

The Persians, who have been joined by a warlike tribe of nomads, surround the Russians with a numerous force, and their horsemen have assumed the offensive. The sending of Russian reinforcements is made particularly difficult by the flooded condition of the country.

The Russians had three men killed yesterday and ten wounded in various minor engagements with the Persians.

The Russian troops penetrated the frontier in the neighborhood of Belesuvar in pursuit of Kurdish brigands who had committed depredations in Russian territory. Russia in sending these troops across the frontier acted on the rights accorded her for the maintenance of order in Northern Persia by the recent Anglo-Russian agreement.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 20.—The latest news received here of the boundary war—that a Russian detachment had been penned in and was calling for reinforcements—has aroused the anxiety of the Foreign Office. It shows that the entire population of this district, composed of well-armed and warlike tribes, is rising to the support of the brigands who have been attacked.

The situation may become still more serious if the Kurdish bandits who inhabit Russian territory, encouraged by the retirement of the Russian troops, join their Persian kindred and threaten the Russian communications.

The town of Shirin, whither one of the Russian detachments has been forced to retire, is situated on the Persian frontier twenty miles from Belesuvar. The detachment of Russian troops from Shirin has been operating to cover the flank of the main force at Belesuvar.

Grand Duke Nicholas Nicholaievitch left here to-day for the Crimea, traveling incognito. It is reported the Grand Duke is on his way to the Caucasus to make a personal inspection of the Persian and the Turkish frontiers.

Despite diplomatic denials, Russia continues to forward reinforcements and munitions of war to the Caucasus. An American traveler, returning from that territory recently, states that he saw train after train loaded with soldiers proceeding in a southern direction. He says the railroad to Kars was so much engaged with military stores that it was unable to accept private freight.

The European military attachés, especially the German attaché, are evincing keen interest in regard to the general situation, and have made a number of official inquiries. The General Staff, in reply to all questions, states that Russia is simply undertaking to repair the negligence of past years in order to put the Turko-Persian frontier in a normal condition for defense.

WILL PUNISH JOHANNITES.

Russian Authorities Moving Against a Sect of Evil Reputation.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 20.—The authorities of St. Petersburg finally have decided upon the prosecution of the leaders of the notorious "Johannite" sect, whose practices have brought the name of Father John of Kronstadt into evil repute in the eyes of all Russians, excepting possibly the lowest classes.

Dozens of men and women who surround the supposed saint have assumed such sacrilegious titles as the Holy Ghost, the Virgin, Archangel Michael, Mary Magdelan, John the Baptist, and the designations of other apostles.

The offenders will be prosecuted not only for blasphemy and secret and illegal practices, but also for forgery, blackmail, robbery, malversation, and a number of other crimes.

Notes of Foreign Affairs.

TOKIO, April 21.—An attempt to destroy the railroad leading from the coast to the capital of Korea on the morning of April 16 was discovered before any serious damage had been done, and Prince Ito arrived at Seoul on schedule time.

LONDON, April 20.—King Edward and Queen Alexandra left London this morning for a visit to Copenhagen, Stockholm, and Christiania, where they will be the guests of the royal families at these capitals.

HAVANA, April 20.—The Conservatives and Miguelistas insist on agreeing on the names of Cubans to replace the American provincial Governors, although such an agreement is futile in view of the fact that Gov. Magoon stipulated that all three parties must reach an agreement with regard to these men before he would remove the present office holders. The Zayistas have refused to unite with the other parties in the matter.

TOKIO, April 20.—Baron Kato starts to-morrow for St. Petersburg to arrange for Russian connections with both the Japanese railroads in Korea. Two experts accompany him.

JAPANESE SEE WALL STREET.

Stock Exchange Gallery Opened for the Visitors.

After being closed for two months, following the explosion in the Stock Exchange of Rome, the visitors' gallery of the New York Stock Exchange was opened yesterday to admit the party of fifty-seven Japanese tourists, accompanied by three women, who visited the financial district in two big sight-seeing automobiles. The party occupied seats in the gallery for half an hour, looking on with much interest at the trading on the floor of the Exchange.

Mrs. Nomura, one of the women, was dazed by the noise made by the brokers, and held her hands to her ears in a vain effort to keep it out.

In the evening the party dined at the Nippon Club as the guests of Mr. Fukoi, the representative of the Mitsu Busan Kisha, the great trust company of Japan. To-day the visitors will visit Prospect Park, Brooklyn, then return to the Chamber of Commerce and spend the evening at Hammerstein's Victoria Music Hall.

SPECTATOR OF DUEL KILLED.

Seven-Year-Old Son of One Fighter Mortally Wounded.

BERNICE, La., April 20.—One spectator was killed and four others injured today during a street duel here. Both duelists were wounded, but not seriously.

The fight was between C. J. Morton and W. F. Barham. The cause of their quarrel is not known. Morton was just stepping off a passenger train accompanied by his wife and seven-year-old son when Barham appeared. Both men opened fire, and Morton's little boy fell, probably mortally wounded. T. W. Clarke was instantly killed, and Thomas R. Ives was wounded in the thigh.

Conductor Alford of the train and a man passenger whose name was not learned were painfully wounded. Morton was struck by two bullets and Barham by one.

TURKEY YIELDS TO ITALY.

Withdraws All Objections to Post Offices—War Cloud Disappears.

ROME, April 20.—Turkey has communicated officially to the Italian Government that it does not object to Italy establishing Post Offices in the Turkish cities where the other powers have like institutions.

Furthermore, the Porte has practically acknowledged the other Italian claims in the matter of the right of Italians freely to purchase property on Turkish territory, and with regard to coast navigation.

As a result of these concessions the Italian Government has issued orders to the fleet that was about to depart for Turkey to remain in Italian waters, and the incident is regarded as closed.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 20.—The difficulty with Italy regarding the opening of Post Offices has been arranged. Turkey has recognized Italy's right to the same treatment in this respect as is enjoyed by the other powers, and no further objection will be raised to the establishment of Italian Post Offices in five cities in which Post Offices of the other powers already exist.

PLAGUE RAGES AT LA GUAYRA.

Disease Rapidly Spreading, People Terrorized—Other Towns Affected.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—An alarming spread of what is declared to be bubonic plague continues to be reported unofficially from La Guayra and other places in Venezuela. Whole families in La Guayra are said to have been stricken, and many deaths have resulted from the disease.

Despite the efforts of the Government authorities to minimize the situation, terror has seized upon the inhabitants. It also is stated that doctors and Government agents are moving the stricken to the crowded hospitals in the middle of the night to conceal as much as possible the exact situation from the inhabitants. Reports received here positively assert that the disease is rapidly gaining headway.

Americans recently from Venezuela describe the condition of the inhabitants of that country as pathetic.

BARBER IN CARACAS.

Trying to Arrange Shipments of Asphalt—Rudolph Dolge Coming Home.

CARACAS, Venezuela, Saturday, April 18.—Amzi L. Barber, former President of the Asphalt Trust, is in Caracas trying to arrange further purchases of asphalt and a renewal of the shipments of asphalt from the property claimed by the New York and Bermudez Asphalt Company.

Rudolph Dolge, local representative of the Orinoco Company, leaves Caracas today for Washington. The high Federal Court of Venezuela recently handed down a decision, from which there is no appeal, against the Manoa Company and the Orinoco Company, Limited, American concerns, annuling the famous Fitzgerald concession under which these companies claimed rights in Venezuela.

Mr. Dolge has entered a vigorous protest here against the action of the Venezuelan Government in the matter.

DISARMING THE MOROS.

Troops Assisted by Constabulary Engaged in Making a Round-Up.

MANILA, April 20.—Detachments of the Twenty-third and Twenty-fifth Infantry, with constabulary and armed launches assisting, are engaged in disarming the Moros on Basilan Island. The troops are distributed around the coast and are cooperating in a series of closing-in movements.

A similar drive has been progressing on the Island of Mindanao.

GRASTY JOINS MUNSEY.

To be General Manager of the New York Publisher's Chain of Newspapers.

An arrangement was concluded yesterday by which Charles H. Grasty will become General Manager of Frank A. Munsey's newspapers—The Baltimore News, The Boston Journal, and The Washington Times.

"A part of my purpose in the purchase of The Baltimore News," said Mr. Munsey, "was to add the man who built up that paper to my forces. When I took possession of The News I found a property without a soft spot in it. It was better in all respects than had been represented. Mr. Grasty's coming to me means no change in, but simply an enlargement of, the plans for daily journalism I have long had in mind."

Mr. Grasty's headquarters will be in New York.

TO PROTECT HUDSON SCENERY

Exchanges Want Highlands Preserved as a Memorial to Henrik Hudson.

A movement has been started by several commercial exchanges, including the Produce Exchange, the Maritime Exchange, and the Consolidated Exchange, for the protection of the romantic scenery of the Highlands section of the Hudson River as a memorial of Henrik Hudson.

A bill has been introduced in the Legislature by Assemblyman Bennett and Senator Saxe, providing for a permanent Hudson Memorial Commission, with power to condemn and take title in the name of the State wherever injury threatens the natural scenery of the Hudson River.

This bill was drawn on the same lines as the acts which were passed by New York and New Jersey in 1900, which secured the protection of the Palisades under an inter-State commission.

The effect of the passage of the bills protecting the Palisades, however, is asserted to have been to spread the damaging work of the quarries along the promontories of the Hudson River above, where the increasing demand for crushed stone has caused the damage of the quarrying operations to extend over many of the most picturesque points of the river.

There are five quarries now located on Hook Mountain, which formerly made a striking feature of the west bank of the Tappan Zee, and from Tomkins Cove down along the shore other quarries are in operation. It is proposed to locate Sing Sing Prison on Bear Mountain, in the Highlands, because the trap rock formation there affords an opportunity for working the convicts in quarries.

The bill just introduced in the Legislature asks for the protection of the Highlands from the north line of the State reservation at Stony Point to the base of Storm King Mountain on Newburg Bay, and on the easterly shore of the river from the north line of the State camp ground at Peekskill to the base of Breakneck Mountain on Newburg Bay.

Court Passes Hat for Mistreated Wife.

ST. LOUIS, April 20.—After denouncing Frank Jasinski for mistreating the mother of his seven children, Police Court Judge Pollard to-day fined Jasinski $500, and then took up a collection, amounting to $17, for the woman. The Judge gave $5.

Rev. W. S. Friedman Rabbi for Life.

DENVER, April 20.—The Rev. William S. Friedman was elected rabbi for life of Temple Emanu-El, in this city, at the annual meeting of the congregation last night. This is an honor seldom bestowed upon Jewish rabbis. The Rev. Mr. Friedman has already served this congregation as rabbi eighteen years.

30,000 Miners Get Back to Work.

Special to The New York Times.

SEATTLE, Washington, April 20.—The crew of the Thomas car has made its final preparation for its departure for Japan to-morrow, and is now in readiness to get away on the Shawmut when she leaves port in the afternoon. The car will be loaded on board the Pacific liner in the morning, and the spare parts and other accessories have already been placed on board.

Everything has been arranged with a view to disembarking with the slightest delay possible on the arrival at Yokohama, so that the machine can get away on the road immediately. The intention is to cross Japan on the road to Tsuruga, and there take ship to Vladivostok, where it is understood the car will arrive on May 12.

The German Protos car left on the steamer Glen Logan early this morning, and Sirtori, the Italian driver, went with it. Sirtori is taking direct to Vladivostok the spare parts and extra tires which Haaga and Scarfoglio left behind when they sailed on Aki Maru for Yokohama last week.

The car cannot cross Siberia without these accessories, and the Italians will be forced to wait until Sirtori arrives before they can start again on the road. The steamer is due to arrive in Vladivostok in twenty days, which will bring them into Siberia on May 10, four days in advance of the American racer. It is doubtful if they can get away much before the Americans in any event.

Preparations are being made by automobilists in Seattle to give the Thomas car a great send-off. An escort of cars will accompany the racing machine to the steamer, and the crew will receive an enthusiastic farewell.

Schuester, who will drive the car through Siberia, is not discouraged by the prospect of getting there behind the other cars, and believes he will be able to overtake them before they get to Irkutsk, even though they do not await his arrival at the port of entry.

The difficulty over the passports will be adjusted at Yokohama, where arrangements have been made to have the papers vised by the Russian officials in Japan.

Announcement was made by the Thomas people that they had made arrangements for gasoline with the Nobel Company to supply the car between Vladivostok and the Russian frontier. After arriving in Russia it will be possible to purchase gasoline without preparations, but it is necessary to caché a supply along the Trans-Siberian Railroad.

ANOTHER CAR IN BRIARCLIFF.

Pope-Hartford Sends Entry and Check for Big Road Race.

There is a possibility that the Pope-Hartford car will be a competitor in the Briarcliff stock car race on Friday. A wire was received yesterday by the Race Committee at Briarcliff from Hartford, asking if the car would be permitted to enter. A reply was sent to Hartford that the entrance fee of $1,000 would have to be deposited as a guarantee of good faith, and if the consent of the other competitors was obtained the Pope would be permitted to start.

Accordingly a representative of the company appeared at Briarcliff last night with a certified check for the amount required, and announced that the car would arrive there this afternoon, when it would be presented to the Technical Committee for examination. They set about getting the consent of the other competitors yesterday afternoon, and last night announced that the consent of nine had been obtained. If admitted the car will be driven by James Mechaley, who is well regarded as a driver of experience. The car will take No. 23, and start last of the competitors.

There were a dozen of the racing cars entered in the Briarcliff race flitting over the course in Westchester County yesterday morning, but no attempts at speed were made. The large number of visitors at the course on Sunday cut up the muddy roads badly and left them in such shape that speed was next to impossible over them. The twelve men who were out in racing cars during the practice hours contented themselves with studying the curves and angles in the road and drove without regard to what record they might be able to make.

There were several interesting developments of the day's practice for the early onlookers. Julien Bloch made his first appearance in the Guggenheim Renault racer and covered the distance carefully. Louis Bergdoll also went around the circuit for the first time in his Benz racer, while Murphy made his first appearance in the Maja car since his accident last week.

The others on the course were all familiar figures, and no incident marked their trials except the bursting of a tire on the Isotta car, which Alfred Poole took around the course. The delay occasioned by substituting a new tire gave rise to a rumor that Poole had been smashed up, but the story proved without foundation. Campbell, in the Allen-Kingston car, made rather the best impression of the day.

The other men who made the circuit were Oldfield, Leland, and Vaughan in the three Stearns racers, Seymour and Watson in the two Simplexes, Robertson in the Panhard, and Roberts in the Thomas. Harding also went around the course, but not in his racing car. Immediately after the practice was over, workmen were poured out on the course and set about repairing the damage done by Sunday's visitors.

The Technical Board examined the two Lozier cars yesterday afternoon, and all of the machines that are to compete have now been fully inspected. The report of the Technical Committee will be made to-day.

FEAR FRENCH AERONAUTS.

Aero Club Would Arouse Inventors to Compete with Parisians' Aeroplanes.

Rivalry among balloon clubs and the desire to create a stimulus in this country for successful experiments with heavier than air machines are likely to lead to some exciting incidents in America during the next few weeks. It is the old story of the West against the East. It was brought out last night at the meeting of the Aero Club of America, at 12 East Forty-second Street, that a committee from the Chicago Aero Club is negotiating with the Parisians for the purpose of bringing to this country the identical machines or duplicates with which Delagrane and Farrman have lately made their notable flights.

"It is to head off the importation of these French machines that I wish to announce that in all probability Delagrane himself will visit New York within the next month to show us how easy it is to make long flights in the air," said Albert Triaca, Chairman of the new Aviation Committee of the club.

This statement created a decided sensation, for Delagrange is one of the leading aeronauts in Europe, and his recent flight of six miles in ten minutes with a motor-driven aeroplane has stirred the aeronauts from one end of the continent to the other.

"Yes," added Wilbur R. Kimball, "and when Delagrange goes, unless the American inventors look out, he will carry back with him the cup offered last year by Stanley Y. Beach of the Scientific American for the first public exhibition in this country of a flight in a heavier than air machine for a distance of 3,200 feet or over. It would be a picnic for the Frenchman to do this over a small section of the Coney Island Boulevard. Perhaps, if he did it, whether we have a big prize or not, by that time, it will be the best thing to arouse inventive ability and practical work among our own people."

The discussion of the evening, which was started by Octave Chanute of Chicago, the pioneer in American aerial flight, was upon the subject of raising a prize of $25,000, to be known as the American Aviation Fund. Among those who spoke favorably of the plan and suggested methods of awarding the money were Peter Cooper Hewitt, A. M. Herring, who is building a machine for the Government; Lee S. Burridge, Charles M. Manly, William J. Hammer, Augustus Post, and Capt. Thomas S. Baldwin.

"Less than five years ago the United States led in aerial navigation," said Mr. Chanute. "The late Prof. Langley showed the possibilities of success by the big glider which he built on the Potomac. No public experiments have been made here since that time and we are now inferior to France."

"Don't forget the Wright brothers," suggested one member, and, as Mr. Chanute had witnessed one of the Wright brothers' flights, he was asked to tell if the Wrights have really done in secret what they have continually professed.

"I know that in September, 1905," added Mr. Chanute, "the Wright brothers did make flights of 11, 17, 20, 22, and 24 miles. They were in the air thirty-eight minutes on their last flight, and the machine was seen by the passengers of a trolley car near Dayton, Ohio, with the result that on the next day hundreds of people surrounded the Wright brothers' grounds with cameras, and, fearing lest their secret would be discovered, the Wrights dismantled their machine and have done nothing since."

"The main thing for America's prestige in the solution of aerial problems is to get the prize," said Mr. Manly, who was Prof. Langley's assistant for several years. "I understand that several subscriptions have already been made. The tests to be made by the Government at Fort Myer this Summer will be a big help toward bringing other inventors to the front."

"The Government wants a machine that will be available for war use," explained Mr. Herring, "and I think the tests will be secret."

Mr. Herring suggested that the Aviation Fund should be divided into several prizes, offering one of from $500 to $1,000 for the longest glide from a given height. Mr. Kimball said that this, in addition to other competitive methods, was being considered by the Contest Committee.

SAILORS HAVE MERRY DAY.

Varied Entertainment at Los Angeles for Men of the Fleet.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 20.—A long day of merrymaking by the sailors of the American battleship fleet, boxing matches, barbecues, baseball games, and Wild West shows being included in the entertainment provided by the city, was brought to a close to-night with two big banquets, one to the petty officers at the largest café in the city, and the other to the Admirals and the commanding officers of the fleet and members of their staffs.

The latter was made the occasion of formal welcome to Los Angeles, both Mayor A. C. Harper and Gov. J. N. Gillett being included among the speakers. Rear Admiral Charles M. Thomas, in command of the fleet, responded to the addresses of welcome.

A vacant chair marked the place originally assigned to Rear Admiral Evans.

CANNON CALLS FOR PAPER TRUST INQUIRY

Offers Resolution for Investigation of Its Methods by House Committee.

SPEAKER TO NAME MEMBERS

Thorough Probing of Charges Against Trust Proposed and Study of All Relevant Facts.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Speaker Cannon to-day renewed the interest of the House in the fight that is being made by the newspaper publishers of the country against the Paper Trust, introducing a resolution for the appointment of a committee of six to investigate "and obtain all possible information" as to the reasons for the increased price of white paper "to the end that needful legislation may be enacted." The resolution, which was referred to the Committee on Rules, of which the Speaker is Chairman, reads as follows:

"Whereas, It is alleged by the American Newspaper Publishers' Association that the cost of paper to the users thereof is at least $60,000,000 per annum greater at the present time than it was two years ago; and

"Whereas, It is alleged by others that the cost of news print paper to newspaper publishers, magazine publishers, and printing house managers will, under the price now asked, be $65,000,000 greater for the current year than heretofore; and,

"Whereas, It is alleged by the American Newspaper Publishers' Association that the statistics compiled by the Bureau of the Census concerning the cost and price of news print paper are erroneous, inaccurate, incomplete, and valueless as a guide to legislation; and,

"Whereas, It is alleged by the American Newspaper Publishers' Association that the price of print paper has increased from 35 to 50 per cent. during the past few months; and,

"Whereas, It is alleged and asserted that the alleged increased price of paper is in part the result of a combination and conspiracy on the part of the wood pulp and paper manufacturers and dealers to control, regulate, monopolize, and restrain inter-State and foreign commerce and trade in the manufacture and sale of news print, manila, fibre, and other kinds of paper and paper products; and,

"Whereas, It is alleged by the American Newspaper Publishers' Association that the International Paper Company and other paper manufacturers and dealers have threatened to advance and have advanced the price of print paper $22 per ton during the last few months; and,

"Whereas, It is alleged that this great advance in the price of paper is made possible by the duty of $6 per ton on print paper, being the same rate of duty for the last eighteen years and in the last three tariff laws; and,

"Whereas, It is claimed and asserted that the price of print paper is in nowise affected by the tariff; that the increase in price of recent date has not been excessive and is not the result either of the tariff import duty or of any combination or conspiracy in restraint of trade or otherwise; but is the result wholly of the increase in the cost of the raw materials and the increase in the wages paid for labor and the shortening of the hours of labor per day; and,

"Whereas, On May 11, 1906, judgment was entered in the Circuit Court for the District of Minnesota dissolving the General Paper Company as a combination in restraint of trade; and,

"Whereas, The increase in the price of paper has occurred notwithstanding the dissolution of the said General Paper Company, or Paper Trust, and the Department of Justice, though appealed to, reports that it has obtained no evidence sufficient to justify the institution of legal proceedings, either civil or criminal, against the alleged combination of wood pulp or print paper manufacturers; and,

"Whereas, It is stated by the Attorney General of the United States that after complaint had been filed with said Attorney General against the so-called paper combination or trust, the complainant refused to furnish legal proof or give the names of witnesses having personal knowledge of the facts; and,

"Whereas, It is alleged that the combination of print paper manufacturers in the United States has purchased the output of all the paper mills in Canada in excess of the home consumption, which said purchase, it is alleged, is in furtherance of conspiracy in restraint of inter-State and foreign commerce; and,

"Whereas, It is alleged that the great production of wood pulp in the United States is rapidly depleting the forests of this country, and that legislation ought to be enacted which will permit and encourage the importation of wood pulp upon more favorable terms, so as to conserve our National forests; and,

"Whereas, It is desirable that the House of Representatives shall be fully informed as to all of the facts in the case and as to whether there does exist, or can exist beyond the reach of the existing power of the Department of Justice and of the courts to prevent, a combination or a conspiracy among the manufacturers or dealers, or others, to so increase the price, to control the character of the paper manufactured, or to regulate the output of wood pulp or the paper mills in restraint of trade among the several States or with any foreign country, to the end that needful legislation may be enacted;

"Now, therefore, resolved, that the Speaker shall appoint a select committee of six members to investigate and inquire into the said alleged facts and to obtain all possible information in regard to the same and to inquire into the elements and conditions involved in the production and supply of wood pulp and print paper in so far as the same are or may be affected by any combination, or conspiracy to control, regulate, monopolize, or restrain inter-State or foreign commerce, and trade in the manufacture, supply, distribution, or sale of wood pulp or paper of any kind, or any of the articles entering into the same, or any of the products of paper, and in so far as the same may be affected by the import duties upon wood pulp or paper of any kind, and in so far as the same may be affected by the rapid destruction of the forests in the United States and the consequent increase in the price of wood which enters into the manufacture of wood pulp, and also to inquire whether the present price of print and other paper is controlled in whole or in part by any combination of persons or corporations engaged in commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, and if so, to inquire into the organization, conduct, methods, and practices of such corporations or persons.

"Said committee, or any sub-committee thereof, shall be authorized to sit in Washington or elsewhere during the session of the House and during the recess of Congress, and shall have power to subpoena and examine witnesses under oath and to send for records, papers, and all other evidence that may be necessary to make the investigation and inquiry herein directed to be made full and complete, and the Speaker shall have authority to sign and the clerk to attest subpoenas during the recess of Congress."

FIGHT ON WYMAN FAILS.

President Again Nominates Him for Postmaster of St. Louis.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—The President to-day sent to the Senate the nomination of Frank Wyman to be Postmaster at St. Louis for a second term of four years.

There has been a long and bitter fight over this office, the three Republican Congressmen from St. Louis opposing Wyman.

ST. LOUIS, April 20.—Wyman's appointment was deferred until charges relating to matters bearing on the conduct of the Postmaster's office and the refusal to change the name of a Post Office station at Valley Park had been investigated. Mr. Wyman maintained that the accusations were groundless.

BORAH CALLS NEGRO TROOPS TRAITORS

Scoffs at Foraker's Plea That They Were Innocent Victims of Brownsville Raid.

THEY DID SHOOT UP TOWN

Compares Defense of the Negroes with the Effort to Obtain Leniency for Harry Orchard.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—The strongest defense of the Administration's action in dismissing three companies of the Twenty-fifth Infantry, colored, for complicity in the raid on Brownsville, Texas, on the night of Aug. 13, 1906, that has yet been made was delivered in the Senate this afternoon by Senator Borah of Idaho, in his maiden speech as a Senator.

It was a legal argument, and Senator Borah declared with great emphasis, as a result of his analysis, that some members of that black battalion certainly did the shooting. "Murder, planned, deliberated upon, and executed with deadly precision," he called it, and declared that "for less offenses many a soldier has been shot at sunrise."

"To my mind it was treason," he said; "if not technically so, yet morally treason in its most aggravated form. To find this spirit of lawlessness, this appetite for crime, in our army, the body which is to maintain the flag wherever it floats, is startling beyond all words to express."

Many negroes were present, but it was by no means so nearly a solid black audience as that which heard Senator Foraker the other day. The diplomatic gallery was well occupied, and in the President's row sat Mrs. Taft, with Theodore Roosevelt, Jr. Senator Foraker, whose argument had been the constant target of Senator Borah's logic and sarcasm, went over and shook hands warmly with his antagonist.

Borah gave Foraker many openings to get into the discussion, but Foraker refused to be tolled along.

Senator Borah, who was special counsel for the State of Idaho in the prosecution of the officials of the Western Federation of Miners for the killing of ex-Gov. Steunenberg, speaking of Harry Orchard, the self-confessed murderer of Steunenberg, said:

"A cold-blooded, inhuman, incarnate devil blows to pieces an ex-Governor upon the doorstep of his home, is caught and confesses, and before the grave of the man who died a martyr to law and order is green, sentimentalism puts a halo upon the brow of the blackest spirit that ever escaped the crypts of hell.

"Men wearing the uniform of a soldier of the Union, the insignia of government and the symbol of law and order, in the quiet of night, while homes are defenseless, assault and attempt to murder whole families, and finally succeed in committing one murder. To compromise with such an act or such a deed is cowardice; it is betrayal of government; it is an insult to every intelligent and right-thinking negro, for it presupposes he is a traitor to his country and a criminal at heart."

Senator Borah made very clear his belief that the evidence established a conspiracy on the part of some of the negro soldiers of the Twenty-fifth Regiment to shoot up the town.

Mr. Borah reviewed at length the testimony in the case and announced his conclusion that "it discloses the guilt of certain members of the Twenty-fifth Infantry as participants in the Brownsville raid beyond a reasonable doubt. "If," he added, "they were guilty at all, they were guilty of deliberate murder—murder planned and deliberated on and accomplished with deadly precision."

PLANNED SUBMARINE MERGER

Brown Explains His Connection with Proposal to Stop Lilley Investigation.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Charles R. Flint of New York to-day testified before the Lilley investigating committee concerning negotiations for a merger between the Lake and Electric Boat Companies prior to May, 1907, when he said he was approached by Grant Hugh Brown, who called on him with a view of obtaining a consolidation.

Mr. Flint devoted considerable time to denying the testimony of Simon Lake that he (Flint) had carried on negotiations looking to a merger of the Lake Boat Company with the Electric Boat Company, though he admitted that he had been informed of a desire on the part of the Lake people "to have peace" subsequent to the commencement of this investigation.

Mr. Flint testified that the contract prices paid to the Electric Boat Company by the United States Government, which Mr. Lilley alleges have netted that company an excessive profit of $1,400,000, are not in excess of prices paid for submarines by foreign Governments to the Lake Company and the Electric Company.

Grant Hugh Brown, who has been brought into prominence by suggesting that the Lilley investigation could be stopped if the Electric Boat Company bought out the Lake Company, was the last witness before the committee.

"I said make the stopping of the investigation a sine qua non to the agreement of purchase," said Mr. Brown, in explaining his connection with the proposition to stop the investigation. He added that he had no ground on which to make that proposition, but took it as a matter of course that if, as he read in the newspapers, the Lake Company was back of the investigation, by buying it out the investigation would be stopped.

RUSH NAVAL BILL THROUGH.

Senate Committee Adds $7,579,031, but No Battleships.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—President Roosevelt's last opportunity to force back into the Naval Appropriation bill the item for four battleships was lost to-day, unless some champion can be found to lead a forlorn hope on the floor of the Senate. Senator Hale rushed the bill through his committee this morning. It carries $7,579,031.45 in increases to the House total.

Senator Hale has announced publicly that if any additional ships are to be provided for, the money should be devoted to the building of colliers.

The principal item of increase is that granting more pay to the officers, civilian professors and instructors at the Naval Academy, who will get 20 per cent. more than at present; the enlisted men at the academy receive a 10 per cent. increase.

Three additional colliers also are provided for in the bill. These will cost $1,800,000, and are to be already built, of American registry, and capable of a load each of 7,200 tons. An mendment authorizes the establishment of a women's nurse corps in the navy.

Gives Up Flying Machine Contract.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—J. F. Scott of Chicago has given up his contract with the War Department for furnishing a heavier than air flying machine for the Signal Office for $1,000. The awards were made by the department with persons or firms for supplying such machines, the other two contracts calling for machines at $20,000 and $25,000 respectively.

TULSANS GO TO PHILADELPHIA

Oklahoma Boomers Are Publishing a Daily Newspaper on Their Train.

The 113 citizens from Tulsa, Oklahoma, who are touring the East in their own special train "on a tour of education" will leave Jersey City this morning for Philadelphia, where they will be entertained by the city officials.

"This part of our trip," said H. O. McClure, President of the Tulsa Commercial Club, which is fathering the expedition, at the Astor yesterday, "is more of a pleasure than a business end. After we leave New York and Philadelphia and visit such cities as Pittsburg, Cleveland, Chicago, and Kansas City, we accomplish more for ourselves in a business way. I do not mean that we actually establish definite commercial relations, but we let the business people of these communities which are nearer Tulsa know something of our resources in the hope that we can enlist their aid in developing our town."

The Tulsans have been publishing on board their train a daily newspaper, which they have distributed in every town and city they have visited. Two printing presses and a force of compositors work in the baggage car of the special train.

The Principals say that the children who come to school hungry are retarded in their studies and "flunk." The Board of Education hopes to increase all the pupils' standards by selling them hot roast beef sandwiches and a bowl of soup for 1 cent each.

VREELAND BILL DEAD AFTER ONE HEARING

House Committee Will Report Fowler Bill, Providing for Currency Commission.

VREELAND STILL HOPEFUL

Proposes Amendments to His Bill and Believes It Will Pass—Hill Says It Has Aldrich Plan Faults.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—By a vote of 13 to 3, the House Banking and Currency Committee this afternoon voted to table the Vreeland bill. Immediately after this vote the Fower bill providing for a currency commission was taken up and agreed to by a vote of 11 to 3. This action followed a single hearing on the Vreeland measure. Those voting to table the Vreeland bill were Fowler, Prince, McMorran, Weems, Waldo, Hayes, Lewis, Pujo, Glass, Gillespie, James, Crawford, and McHenry. Those voting against the motion were Burton, McKinney, and Weeks. McCreary, Durey, and Powers were absent. Those who voted in favor of the commission bill were Fowler, Prince, McMorran, Weems, Waldo, Hayes, McKinney, Lewis, Glass, Gillespie, and Crawford. Weeks, Pujo, and James voted against the motion, and Burton and McHenry answered present.

Mr. Vreeland, who is a New York banker, still hopes that his bill, or one of a similar nature, will become law.

Mr. Vreeland surprised the committee by announcing that he had made some important changes in his bill. His amendments as given are as follows:

"First—The aggregate capital and surplus of the National Clearing House Associations created under the bill are reduced from $10,000,000 to $5,000,000.

"Second—The rate of taxation on this emergency currency shall begin at 4 per cent. instead of at 6, and shall increase 1 per cent. a month, until it reaches a rate of 10 per cent.

"Third—The total amount of emergency currency which may be issued under the bill is increased from $500,000,000 to $700,000,000. Under the provisions of the bill each section of the country and each State is entitled to issue such a proportion of emergency currency as the capital and surplus of the National banks in such State bear to the otal capital and surplus of all National banks.

"Fourth—An amendment providing for the creation of a currency commission to take up and report upon the whole question of currency and banking laws."

Mr. Vreeland defended his measure on political grounds, as being a safe compromise between a sweeping change in the present currency system and as a makeshift that would be in working order by next Fall in case there should be any stringency in the money market.

Mr. Hill of Connecticut declared that the bill retained the essential faults of the Aldrich bill.

JUMP IN FIRE INSURANCE.

Supt. Kelsey's Report Shows Increase for 1907 Aggregating $261,700,000.

ALBANY, April 20.—Fire risks aggregating $5,440,407,457 were written by fire insurance companies in the State in 1907, according to the report of Superintendent of Insurance Kelsey. This is an increase of $261,700,070 as compared with the preceding year. In the same period the marine and inland risks written amounted to $581,595,813, an increase of $76,959,174 over 1906.

At the close of the year 1907 the fire, fire-marine, and marine insurance companies doing business in this State were possessed of $454,370,298 of admitted assets, not including assets held abroad nor premium notes of mutual companies, an increase of $13,619,357 as compared with 1906. The liabilities of these companies, excepting scrip and capital, were $269,285,909, an increase of $9,740,725 over the return of the preceding year.

The income was $298,475,095, and the disbursements were $258,929,121, a decrease as compared with 1906 of $66,760,273 in income, and a decrease of $100,294,726 in disbursements.

The fire premiums received were $42,080,333; fire losses paid, $20,439,016; fire losses incurred, $21,732,395, showing an apparent net excess of fire premiums received over fire losses incurred of $20,347,938.

The estimated expense of the transaction of this business is $14,026,777, which, if added to the incurred losses, make a total of $35,759,173, or an excess of fire premiums received over fire losses incurred and estimated expenses of $6,321,160.

SUES EX-WIFE'S HUSBAND.

Editor Harden Wants $150,000 from Broker Who Wed Former Wife.

By the filing of the complaint and summons with the County Clerk, Percival L. Harden, editor of The Club Fellow and Washington Mirror, began suit yesterday against William T. Hoops, a broker, to recover $150,000 for the alienation of the affections of his former wife, Mrs. Maude Alene Sullivan Harden, who is now Mrs. Hoops.

In his complaint Harden sets forth that his wife got a divorce from him in Chicago on Jan. 24, 1908, and that next day she married Hoops. He says he was not served in the suit; that he did not appear, and that the Illinois court did not obtain jurisdiction over him.

COWBOY FANNED OUT GAS.

Then Gavin Brennan Hung Sombrero On the Jet—He'll Recover.

Gavin Brennan, 22 years old, of Sheridan, Wyoming, a "broncho buster" with the Buffalo Bill Show, reached New York for the first time at 2 o'clock yesterday morning and registered at the Putnam House. He fanned out the gas with his sombrero, hung it on the jet, and went to bed. He was found unconscious in the morning. He may recover. Gas is not used in Brennan's home town.

DROPPED HER PROPELLER.

HALIFAX, N. S., April 20.—With her propeller blades gone, the German tank steamer Burgermeister Petersen, from Shields for Philadelphia, arrived to-day in tow of the Leyland Line steamer Columbian. The Burgermeister lost her propeller on April 9 and drifted helplessly until April 18, when the Columbian took her in tow.

Hope to Catch Bloomingdale Burglars.

Detectives investigating the robbery of the home of Emanuel Bloomingdale at 42 West Sixty-ninth Street on Sunday night believe that they have clues which will lead to the capture of the thieves who took several hundred dollars' worth of jewelry from the Bloomingdale home. The robbers were discovered at work by the young daughter of Mr. Bloomingdale, who is a lawyer, and has no connection with the firm of Bloomingdale Brothers, and it is hoped that she may be able to identify them.

No Receiver for Oriental Bank.

Supreme Court Justice Dowling decided yesterday against Attorney General Jackson on his renewed application for the appointment of new receivers for the Oriental Bank.

UNION AS BRIDGE WRECKERS.

Commissioner Drew Says Iron Workers Have Revived Reign of Terror.

Commissioner Walter Drew of the National Erectors' Association, composed of employers of the structural iron workers throughout the country, made a report yesterday in which he stated that the same element which formed the "wrecking crew" in the days of the late Samuel J. Parks appears to be abroad again. In the last six months, he says, fourteen attempts have been made to wreck the property of members who employ men on the open-shop plan.

"For a good while back, since the open shop was declared against the Housesmiths' Union," the report says, "there have been attempts to wreck property and commit other acts of violence. Not long ago two bridges which are being constructed by the Lucius Construction Company in Cleveland, were damaged with dynamite. A day or two ago the guy ropes on a big derrick over railroad tracks in the Bronx, where the Youngstown Construction Company was putting up structural iron work, were so loosened that the vibration of a train in passing would have caused the derrick to fall to the tracks. The watchman accidentally discovered the condition of the derrick and the ropes were made taut.

"About the same time Frank Pitzel, a foreman of the Hay Foundry Company of this city at a job in Jersey City, was attacked by a gang and badly beaten. A week or two ago an attempt was made at night to blow up a bridge which the Pennsylvania Steel Company is building for the Pennsylvania Railroad at Perth Amboy, and about the same time a bolt was loosened on a bridge which the American Bridge Company is putting up at Hackensack.

"About a week ago an attempt was made to blow up with dynamite pier work, for which the McClintic-Marshall Company has the contract, at Seventeenth Street and North River, New York. Other firms whose work has been attacked are the Pittsburg Construction Company, which had a derrick car blown up at a contract in Chicago; Brann & Stewart, the Wisconsin Bridge Company, and a number of other big concerns.

"In all cases the open shop was in operation where the wrecking attempts were made. In some cases the outrages followed a demand for recognition of the union."

LAUDS THE CONSTITUTION.

Cortelyou Says It Meets All Needs of National Growth.

UTICA, N. Y., April 20.—Secretary Cortelyou delivered a speech to-night at the annual dinner of the Utica Chamber of Commerce at Utica, N. Y., on "Business and Citizenship." He said, in part:

"The Federal Constitution, 'the most wonderful work,' as Gladstone characterized it, 'ever struck off at a given time by the brain and purpose of man,' has been found to meet the broad and general needs of our wonderful National growth. It meets those needs to-day."

TRAVEL TO EUROPE FALLS OFF THIS YEAR

Summer Transatlantic Travel Will Probably Be Less Than for Many Years.

HOME TRAFFIC TO PROFIT

Steamships Have Berths to Spare Even in June—More Going to Mediterranean Ports.

Judging by the advance bookings at the offices of the various steamship companies, the annual exodus from America to Europe will be considerably less this Summer than for some years. The money stringency, the Presidential campaign, and the big increase in tonnage, they say, have all combined to keep down the figures.

Accommodations can be got now on almost any steamship booked to sail in June, including some of the best rooms, which are usually taken long before this time of year. In some cases nearly all the promenade deck rooms are still to be had, and in others there are blocks of eight and twelve rooms which have not been spoken for. The only exceptions were ships in the Mediterranean trade, on which all of the best rooms had been taken for June and July.

The opinion among the agents was that travelers of moderate means were going to stay at home, and the wealthy were undecided yet where to go. It was expected that the American home resorts would reap the benefit of the decrease in European travel, and that short-voyage steamship lines would get much of the patronage. As an example of this, the advance bookings to Bermuda are so much in excess of former years that the new hotel, the Prince George, will keep open the entire Summer, and the steamship company to Bermuda has advanced the round-trip rates from $35 to $40.

One of the oldest steamship agents said: "The trouble is that the companies have made their minimum rates too high. The minimum first-class fare, which means an inside room with three or four berths, ranges from $82.50 to $127.50.

"Of course," added the agent, "many regular Summer travelers are going over, but they are paying less for their accommodations than for many years. The increase in tonnage has also made a great difference. Since last season the Lusitania, Mauretania, and Kronprinzessin Cecilie have been added to the list of luxurious Atlantic liners, and the new Holland-America liner Rotterdam will be out in July."

Frank A. Munsey
on the Business and Political Situation

IN the May Number of Munsey's Magazine, Mr. Munsey has an article on the panic and the causes that brought it about. He says some things and says them straight from the shoulder. He hands it out good and hard to Wall Street and to the Grand Dukes who have been running things in this country with a high hand—running them as the Grand Dukes of Russia have run things over there. The title of the article is—

There isn't money enough in the world today
to do the world's work

Mr. Munsey takes emphatic issue with Wall Street and the followers of Wall Street who hold the President responsible for the panic. It is not his purpose in the discussion to acquit Mr. Roosevelt of blame, but rather to get at the facts, as the facts are necessary to intelligent progress in the recovery of our business activities.

"If these facts," Mr. Munsey says, "acquit the President, he is, as a matter of common honesty, entitled to the acquittal." But what we want to know, and should know, is the truth. And the basic purpose with Mr. Munsey has been to lay bare the truth.

Mr. Munsey in this article clears away a vast amount of the distorted and awfully befogged ideas about this financial crash. The article is clear, convincing, forceful. It is not a dry, ponderous handling of the subject, but is swift and dramatic in expression, with all the sweep and picturesqueness of a novel. You cannot afford to miss reading it. No one who has any interest in the vital things of the day can afford to miss reading it.

NEW PLAY ABOUT THE REVOLUTION

It Shows That War Is Not What Gen. Sherman Calls It, but Is a Jolly Game.

MORE LIKE COMIC OPERA

Author Announces That His Creditors Await the Verdict, but Their Hopes Are Vain.

THE LUCK OF MACGREGOR, a play in four acts, by Edward Vroom. GARDEN.

Larry Macgregor	Mr. Vroom
Colonel Stedman	Henry Norman
Lieutenant Colonel Johnson	William Walcott
Lieutenant Barker	William F. Haddock
Sergeant Bruce	Henry Duggan
Watson	Frederick Guest
Clincker	Ira T. Moore
Evans	George Burleigh
Jacob Van Benschoten	Harry G. Hockey
Jim Macgregor	E. B. Henley
Perkins	William Wray
General Anthony Wayne	John Morgan
Janet Macphee	Miss Margaret Sayres
Margaret Bruce	Miss Katherine Mulkins

Another page was opened on the Revolution last night by Mr. Edward Vroom, who succeeded in showing that war, instead of being what Gen. Sherman called it, is one of the jolliest sports imaginable. It consists chiefly in hunting for stolen plans, very much like a game of "Button, button, who's got the button?" except that you must know something to play the game. In war, according to Mr. Vroom, there is a premium on stupidity; the higher the office the more stupid the man. And the stupidest man of the lot is the blustering Colonel in command. With the other officers on view, he helps to destroy another illusion of long standing. Hitherto the Continentals have been held in high esteem for their success over British arms. After seeing Mr. Vroom's play you will want to know why it took so long to end the war.

"Why—oh, why did you do it?" asked the trembling heroine in Act III.

And echo answered "Why?"

But the hero also wrote the play. So he did not answer. No man—not even a hero—is obliged to incriminate himself.

He had proclaimed his loyalty to the King, and he had been sentenced to be hanged by the neck until dead, and there was the gallows with the noose all ready. He had bullyragged the Colonel and the official jury, and he had lied like a gentleman to save the girl he loved. He had been accessory to the actions of the Continental spy serving as an officer in the British forces, and he had helped him to evade the penalty.

Still he maintained that he was loyal to the King. And he had proved his worthiness as an officer by spinning a story of how he had left the plans of the fort on the sideboard, whence they had been wantonly purloined. Still he was loyal, and thought he ought to be acquitted. And the Colonel believed in him. When, however, he insisted on reciting the Queen Mab speech from "Romeo and Juliet" even the Colonel thought it was time to hang him. That made is unanimous.

Then the girl, who had repented of "those cruel words" was allowed to see him for the last time. And while the guard turned its back—or its several backs—she threw her arms about his neck and begged him in heaven's name to desert the British and become a good, true-blue American. But he refused, again announcing that he was loyal. Then, when the fort was suddenly attacked by a company headed by the deserter, who was his sweetheart's father, he shouted, "To hell with the King!" though he was still a loyal British subject. Presumably they married in the end lived loyally ever after. But before that much happened.

The British officers were stationed at Fort George, from where you could see to Spuyten Duyvil, which showed how much clearer the atmosphere was than some other things. And McGregor, being Scotch on his father's side and Irish on his mother's, was the pet of the army, having worked up from private to Captain in less than no time. Naturally this had aroused the jealousy of Lieut. Col. Johnson, one of these stern, palefaced, lower-lip chewing persons who is always to be found in pursuit of honest worth. It was no fault of McGregor's that he had a cousin of the same name who was a spy in the Continental forces, nor that this spy arrived at Fort George just at the critical moment when the Lieutenant had charged the Captain with disloyalty. Nor did McGregor have eyes in the back of his head to see the heroine slip the fatal papers into his knapsack when his enemy was snooping round on the lookout for evidence against him. But the papers were found in his possession, and the Colonel, who had been twice lenient, was forced to demand his sword and bring him a prisoner to the quarters.

It was a touching thing to see Janet McChree, housekeeper of the quarters, pretend that she was the mother of the heroine, though to do so she had to sully her hitherto unsullied spinster name. And we hope and believe that the Dutch innkeeper who had been trying to make love to her through both the preceding acts was finally undeceived and gave her the little gold band for which she had long been waiting. It was a pretty thing, too, to see the whole British army chasing from Fort George to Spuyten Duyvil on the hunt for the papers, leaving the Colonel and his prisoner unguarded, though there was never any knowing when the hated Continentals might arrive. Such trustfulness showed that war, after all, is not so black as it has been painted. It was noticeable that the British officer, who was in reality a Continental spy, had plenty of company in his desertion. For the British force became small just before the Continentals made their attack upon the fort.

No one has yet written a revolutionary play that amounted to anything, but no one can be recalled who has written one quite as foolish as Mr. Vroom's.

The acting was generally on a par with the play, though Mr. Vroom displayed some spirit, and made a curtain speech of much delicacy, in which he mentioned that his creditors were out front and were much interested in the fate of the production. They are doomed to disappointment.

YANKEE PRINCE IS AMUSING.

Musical Comedy of Patriotic Order Is a Real Cohan Show.

THE YANKEE PRINCE, a musical play in three acts. Words and music by George M. Cohan. Knickerbocker Theatre.

Franklyn Fielding	Jerry J. Cohan
Percy Springer	George M. Cohan
Whiteside Webster	Jack Gardner
Earl of Weymouth	Frank Hollins
Steve Daly	Tom Lewis
John Fagan	Sam. J. Ryan
De Vrie	J. Jiquel Lanoe
Duke of Dollsford	Robert Emmett Lennon
Mrs. Fielding	Helen F. Cohan
Evelyn Fielding	Josephine Cohan
Lillian Lloyd	Estelle Wentworth
Gertrude Spivans	Stella Hammerstein
Detective	William Leyle
Guard	William Leyle
Waiter	Donald Crisp
Policeman	Donald Crisp
Bell Boy	John Jarrott

"The Yankee Prince" is a typical Cohan show with many marches for the chorus, much slang, a good deal of American flag waving, and the other factors that go to make up this particular brand of musical comedy, which differs from any other kind. Even Mr. Cohan's favorite speech about not wishing to be taken seriously was included in the evening's melange. The new play is not as good as "Little Johnnie Jones," but on the other hand it is much better than "Fifty Miles from Boston."

Mr. Cohan has dropped melodrama from his recipe for musical comedy, and "The Yankee Prince" is almost always amusing. It entertained the audience last evening and it is likely to entertain audiences for many evenings to come.

Having more or less exhausted Broadway as a topic for enthusiasm in his other plays, Mr. Cohan exploits Chicago in this one. In fact, Chicago is sure to take "The Yankee Prince" to its heart so soon as New York is tired of it. That is if the label for the last act scene is changed on the programme. It is announced as Michigan Avenue, but doubtless the few in the audience last evening who had visited the Windy City recognized the Lake Shore Drive.

The story of the play is more or less unimportant, but it centres around an American girl, whom an English Earl desires to marry for her money. Finally, of course, she marries the American man, who has been constant through three acts.

Many of the songs will soon be whistled, and almost all of them won many recalls last night. One especially, called "Money," was violently applauded, and was liked none the less for its obvious debt of gratitude to the "Woman" song in "The Merry Widow." Other songs which will become popular, are "Yankee Doodle's Come to Town," "Think It Over Carefully," and "I'm to Marry a Nobleman."

In "The Yankee Prince" the four Cohans are once more reunited, Miss Josephine Cohan returning to the fold which she deserted some years ago. Jerry Cohan is again forced to be disagreeable on the stage, but Mrs. Cohan has a very amusing part, which she makes the most of. Miss Cohan's part is a slight one, but she and her brother danced themselves into the hearts of the audience.

Stella Hammerstein, in three wonderful gowns, floated through the play with distinction. Her part was explained in the last act, when she announced with real humor: "I am Gertrude Spivins, the She Detective!"

Frank Hollins, an English actor, played extremely well the part of the impossible Earl, who carried fat men from Chicago on his shoulders through the tearooms of the Savoy and wore a violet waistcoat with evening clothes.

Tom Lewis, as Steve Daly from Chicago, with a letter from John L. Sullivan to the King, played a part much like that of the Unknown in "Little Johnnie Jones." He was amusing.

CHILDREN TO REPEAT PLAYS.

To Give "Editha's Burglar" and "'Op-o'-Me Thumb" at the Alliance.

The first of two performances by the Children's Educational Theatre will be given under the auspices of the City History Club at the Educational Alliance, East Broadway and Jefferson Street, next Thursday evening. The children have given both plays before.

Theatre Cases Wiped Off Docket.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 20.—More than 2,000 cases against theatre owners, actors, managers, and other employed in Kansas City playhouses, which were brought as a result of the Sunday crusade started by Judge William H. Wallace of the Criminal Court last Supember, were wiped off the docket of the court to-day when I. B. Kimbrell, the Prosecuting Attorney, made a motion to dismiss the cases. All theatre cases started since last September and up to the indictments returned on April 3 are included in the list.

YOUNG YALE ACTOR GETS FROHMAN OFFER

Thomas Achelis, Jr., Makes a Big Hit in "Revizor," Presented by College Club.

COMPLIMENTED BY CRANE

After Daniel Frohman had watched the performance of "Revizor," interpreted yesterday afternoon by the Yale Dramatic Association in the Waldorf-Astoria ballroom, he offered Thomas Achelis, Jr., who acted the principal rôle, an important part in one of his companies for next season. He pronounced Achelis the best amateur he had ever seen, and this opinion was general, judging from the applause the young man received.

Achelis, who is a senior, played the rôle of a blustering, irresponsible, and conscienceless young Russian with a bravado and authority that astonished the audience, which included Miss Margaret Illington, Miss Margaret Dale, Miss Elisabeth Marbury, William H. Crane, William Lyon Phelps, and Frank Keenan.

Apart from the success of Achelis, the performance was diverting and well acted, and the Yale students achieved more than amateurs are wont to. The classic farce of government corruption and mistaken identity was an excellent vehicle. There was not a tedious moment, and the boys in 1830 hoopskirts and amazing coiffures won countless laughs.

Achelis is the son of Thomas Achelis of 16 West Sixty-ninth Street. The chance of his adopting the stage as a profession is remote, and it is his intention to go abroad to study architecture. He acted in "The Pretenders" of Ibsen last season, and during the Winter he played at the Plaza with the Junior League in "The Importance of Being Earnest." On every occasion he has won laurels, but his biggest achievement was yesterday.

William H. Crane went back of the scenes and complimented the young actor, and predicted for him a bright future if he went in for the histrionic art seriously. After the performance Achelis and Mr. Frohman met. The young man was bewildered by his success and the material appreciation of his work. Up to that time he had never considered going on the stage, and did not give an immediate answer.

Maxwell Parry, Arthur Hartwell, Matthew Ely, and Charles R. Hopkins were other students who took leading rôles, and they brought to the stage creditable work, which suggested careful rehearsing and inherent talent. The play was admirably put on by Frank Lea Short.

"Revizor, or The Government Inspector," concerns the expected visit to a provincial town of an emissary of the Czar to look into the administration of the municipal affairs. The town is corruption ridden, and its officials are all blackguards. They dread the coming inspection, and finally a stranger arrives, who is mistaken for the representative from St. Petersburg. The stranger is Ivan Aleksondrovitch, a young ne'er-do-well, who is starving at the inn for lack of money. He is dined and wined, principally wined, and in a clever way he upholds his end of the deception. Finally, the real Revizor arrives, leaving the corrupt officials aghast.

Maxwell Perry played the prefect with finish, and Matthew Ely as his wife and Arthur Hartwell as his daughter wore ludicrous crinolines. They were wonderful girls, with their deep baritone voices and their affectations of the mincing steps and coquettish airs of Russian ladies.

Of the others, Charles R. Hopkins distinguished himself, and Miles C. Hannah as the adventurer's lackey contributed a good character sketch.

Last night a fashionable audience applauded the performance. The boys will go on a week's tour with "Revizor."

EVA TANGUAY WON'T PLAY.

Declines to Fill Baltimore Engagements Because Rivals Are Featured.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 20.—Eva Tanguay, who arrived here this morning to appear as an "eccentric comedienne" in the Keith show at the Maryland Theatre, returned to New York in high dudgeon two hours later. She refused to keep her contract because Rock and Fulton, her rivals, are billed for the same show.

Miss Tanguay was to have filled a two weeks' engagement. Immediately after her arrival she hired a cab and drove around to study the billboards. When she saw how her rivals had been "played up" on the advertising signs she returned to the theatre and demanded to know why she had not been "played up." Explanations did not explain to her satisfaction, and away she went.

'COLLEGE WIDOW' IN LONDON.

George Ade's Comedy Delights Audience—Critics Disagree About It.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, April 21.—George Ade's "College Widow," with an all-American company, was produced last night for the first time in England at the Adelphi Theatre by Col. Henry W. Savage and an English associate, apparently to the great satisfaction of a packed house. The applause at the conclusion of the third and last acts kept the players bowing their acknowledgments for several minutes.

Critics in several of this morning's papers pick flaws in the play and profess mystification as to its slang terms, but they highly praise the acting, and declare that the entertainment was amusing.

The Standard says: "If we are not mistaken, the scene of the football match will take London by storm. It is magnificent." The Daily Mail's critic, characterizing the play as "'The Belle of New York' without music," says: "No matter if it is all about football; it might just as well have been about ping-pong. You wanted to stand on your seat and cheer."

Other criticisms are less complimentary.

OPERA STARS HAD TO WALK.

Caruso and Others Found No Cabs When They Got to Chicago.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 20.—Members of the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York arrived in Chicago early this morning in two special trains over the Pennsylvania Railroad. They began a week's engagement at the Auditorium this evening with "La Bohême" for the initial performance.

The trains arrived more than two hours ahead of the expected time, and there were no cabs or other conveyances at the station to meet the singers. Those who came on the Washington special put the blame on M. Lucas, the French tenor, for their plight.

As the train neared Chicago M. Lucas was the first to arise. At 5 o'clock he went through the train and awoke the passengers.

"This is Chicago," he said in French. "Get up quick if you don't want to be carried back to Washington."

The warning was heeded by Caruso, Plançon, Stracciari, Mme. Fornia, and Mme. Jacoby. They hastily dressed, gathered up their hand baggage on the run, and rushed to the platforms only to find there were no cabs in sight.

Meanwhile Mr. Lucas had disappeared. He walked over to the Auditorium Annex, and his name headed the list of the day's registrations. Caruso took the joke good naturedly: Plançon was vexed; Mme. Fornia and Mme. Jacoby said they would later tell M. Lucas what they thought of him.

"LOVE WALTZ" IN VAUDEVILLE

Jesse L. Lasky's Viennese Operetta Has a "Soul Kiss" Conclusion.

The first New York presentation in vaudeville of Jesse L. Lasky's offering, "The Love Waltz," took place yesterday afternoon at Keith & Proctor's Fifth Avenue Theatre. The piece was staged lavishly, but though fairly well received, failed to score a decided hit.

"The Love Waltz" is described on the programme as a "Viennese operetta," and has evidently sought to retain something of the atmosphere now familiar to the New York public through the presentations of "The Merry Widow" and "A Waltz Dream." The libretto is by Paul West; the lyrics by Jesse L. Lasky, and the music by Charles Berton.

"The Love Waltz" cannot be called strictly a waltz, but rather a musical pantomime with a "soul-kiss" conclusion. The leading parts were acted and sung by Alfred Kappeler, Alexander Baldwin, Florence Sylvester, and Audrey Maple.

Milwaukee's New Theatre Dedicated.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., April 20.—Milwaukee's new theatre, the Majestic, was formally dedicated to-night as a vaudeville house, Mayor-elect David S. Rose delivering the dedicatory address. The theatre is housed in a fourteen-story building, erected by Uihlein Brothers at a cost of $1,500,000, and the lessees of the theatre are Herman Fehr of Milwaukee and C. E. Kohl of Chicago.

Fritzi Scheff at the Academy.

Fritzi Scheff opened her final New York engagement in "Mlle. Modiste" at the Academy of Music last night to a large audience. She sang the favorite rôle, which has now served her for three seasons, with captivating spirit. The supporting company was that with which she has toured all this season. Charles Dillingham announces that he will present Fritzi Scheff in a new musical comedy on Broadway in the Autumn.

"Lil Mose," Musical Comedy, Is Staged

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., April 20.—"Lil Mose," a new musical comedy, the lyrics of which were written by Fred Nixon Nirdlinger and Charles H. Brown, with music by A. Baldwin Sloane, was put on at the Savoy Theatre to-night. Some of the songs are "Maid of My Dreams," "Roly Poly Oly," "Deutcher Maid," and "Dusky Dago Boys."

'The Gay Musician' Opens in Baltimore

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, April 20.—"The Gay Musician," a comic opera by Julian Edwards, libretto by Seidl and Campbell, had its first presentation here to-night in the Academy of Music. The music is bright and catchy. Amelia Stone and Walter Percival appeared in the leading rôles.

'Papa Lebonnard' Produced in English

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., April 20.—With Henry E. Dixey in the title rôle, "Papa Lebonnard," in which Ermete Novelli, the Italian, appeared earlier in the season, was given its first performance in English to-night at the Broad Street Theatre. The play has been translated into English by Kate Jordan.

"The Flower of the Ranch" Returns.

Mabel Barrison and Joseph Howard opened a return New York engagement in the musical comedy "The Flower of the Ranch" at the Majestic Theatre last night. Several new musical and spectacular numbers were offered.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Henry B. Harris has engaged Flora Juliet Bowley to appear in the chief feminine role of one of his important new productions in the Autumn. Her last New York appearance was as leading woman with Robert Edeson in "Classmates."

Richard Carle, in his new musical comedy, "Mary's Lamb," will come to the New York Theatre on May 25 for a Summer engagement. The piece is an adaptation of "Madame Mongodin," which has been presented in English under the name of "Mrs. Ponderbury's Past."

Otto Weil, the new director of the Irving Place Theatre, will sail for Europe to-day on the Kronprinz Wilhelm, and during his stay abroad will devote his attention to arranging for artists, dramas, and comic operas for his playhouse. He has already obtained from Heinrich Conried the rights to produce "Husarenfieber."

At the sale of boxes and seats for the Friars' Festival, to be held on May 14 at the New York Theatre, which opened yesterday, the four largest subscriptions were Abraham Erlanger, $250 for a box; Lee Shubert, $250 for a box; Frederic Thompson, $250 for a box, and Lew Dockstader, $250 for a box.

"The Clue," the new play of New York society life, will have its first presentation on any stage under the management of Nixon & Zimmerman at Atlantic City on May 7. The piece will open for a run at the Garrick Theatre, Philadelphia, on May 11.

BROOKLYN AMUSEMENTS.

At the Columbia Theatre Harry Clay Blaney was seen as "The Boy Detective."

Mme. Zelie de Lussan headed the vaudeville bill yesterday at the Orpheum. A large number of well-known vaudeville performers were also included in the programme.

HOPE FOR PARISI OF THE MARIONETTES

People's Institute May Save His Manikin Theatre in Elizabeth Street.

A VICTIM OF HIGH ART

Old Patrons Quit When He Bought New Figures, but Public Schools May Take Them Up.

The Drama Committee of the People's Institute, which has the exclusive right to advertise theatres in the public schools, went down to the Marionettes Theatre, 258 Elizabeth Street, last night to see the "Tales of the Paladins of France," given there, with a view to placing it upon the People's Institute's list of plays recommended for school children.

To be sure, Signor Antonino Parisi didn't comprehend exactly what this meant. Finally a light began to break through when it was explained that the Drama Committee has something to do with the bill posters outside of Cooper Union. Now he firmly expects that the pictures of his marionettes will be placed on the billboards of Cooper Union, so that many people will come and see the "Tales of the Paladins of France"—even enough to bring in $12 a week, which would be a fortune at 258 Elizabeth Street, for things have been going rather hardly there of late, because Signor Parisi takes a strictly "art for art's sake" view of his theatre.

Signor Antonino Parisi is a mechanic by trade and he puts all his profits into the marionettes. Why? At this question a look of bewilderment came over the face of the Sicilian, but Nunzio, the 16-year-old son, who does all the English speaking for the family, came to his assistance. "Oh, he don' know why. He just love it."

So for years the profits of the mechanic's trade have been devoted to "art for art's sake," and many marionettes have been added, till the dramatis personae number over 300, of which the largest dolls cost over $150 apiece. But the Sicilians in Elizabeth Street did not approve of this enlargement. They had learned to know the old figures, and when many new dolls were added the plays became beyond their comprehension and they deserted to smaller places devoted to giving the public of Elizabeth Street what it wants, even as is done on Broadway.

Very recently however the hand of judgment has rested upon the base deserters, for as the Parisis will tell you, the police have condemned as unsafe the building in which their chief competitor was giving his performance. Notwithstanding the misfortune of his rivals, "art for art's sake" at Signor Parisi's has been having a hard time, although neither father nor son dreamed for one instant of giving it up. Still the lack of patronage has made them very unhappy, especially Nunzio, the sixteen-year-old artist in chief of the theatre. Nunzio wants to be a painter, but he isn't willing to talk about it, for how can he be an artist when he can't have any lessons?

Although his only teaching has been what he could give himself, Nunzio is the only unconsciously pre-Raphaelite in the city. He began by renewing the faces of the dolls as they became worn. Then he made pictures of the plays, which are based on the legends of Charlemagne and the "Song of Roland," and which are made up of knights, saints, heroes, kings, and monks and all the mediaeval world, so Nunzio is truly pre-Raphaelite.

Besides the theatre, he had only the colored Sunday supplements of the newspapers. Up in the top floor of 291 Elizabeth Street, Nunzio's mother and grandmother will show you all his pictures carefully kept, with frescoes of the battles of Charlemagne next the popular characters from the "comic pages."

It was while expenses were going up and his countrymen were deserting to cheaper marionettes that the People's Institute came to the rescue of the Parisis. It was suggested to the Drama Committee that at the Marionette Theatre, the children could see the incidents of history really acted out and that the "Tales of the Paladins of France" ought to be placed on the list of plays recommended in the public schools for the sake of their historical value. Accordingly, last night two members of the Drama Committee appeared.

They took their seats in front, one attentively following from the printed synopsis of another play, and having a hard time to make it fit. The other trusted to the broken English of an Italian spectator, who explained succinctly: "He—the old man, the King—have daughter; want her to marry. She don' want."

The lady marionette at this moment turned her back upon her stern parent, who shoved her rudely off the stage. "Then the King—he is in Jerusalem—call the mens. They fight, oh, three, four, five time, to see which is the best man," explained the kind spectator.

They had a smashing old tournament in full armor, while all the Parisi family, assembled behind the scenes, stamped their feet to make the noise of battle. The armor had a bright shine, for it is the last made by Vicenzio, the one-eyed brassworker, who did that by day and vended peanuts by night. He even constructed a wonderful nine-foot, armor-clad battleship on wheels to vend his peanuts in, but he died just before the last turret was finished.

Anyway, the marionettes made a splendid fight for the judges, who, at the close did not announce their decision. There is danger that unless the committee does come to the rescue and recommend the "tales of the Palladins" to the school children, that this may be the last fight of the marionettes.

FAVORS NEW UTILITIES BILL.

Mr. Willcox Wants Jurisdiction Over Telephone and Telegraph Companies.

During the last week or ten days there have been rumors in this city and in Albany that Chairman Willcox of the Public Service Commission was opposed to the bill putting telephone and telegraph companies under the jurisdiction of the commission. Mr. Willcox yesterday sent the following letter to Senator Alfred R. Page, explaining his attitude:

> My Dear Senator Page: My attention has been called to statements which have been made, saying I am opposed to extending the jurisdiction of the Public Service Commission over the telephone and telegraph companies of this State.
>
> I desire to say that I am heartily in favor of amending the law so that the jurisdiction of the commissions will extend to both telephone and telegraph companies, for I have always believed that the jurisdiction over these companies should have been included in the original bill.

The bill will probably come up for passage in the Legislature within the next ten days.

Buffalo Bill's Wild West To-night.

The first performance of the Buffalo Bill Wild West Show for the season will occur to-night at the Madison Square Garden, with Col. Cody as much in evidence as in former years. In addition to the perennial features of the entertainment, there will be two big scenic spectacles, depicting an avalanche and a prairie fire. There will also be a realistic representation of the battle of Summit Springs, with nearly a hundred Indian warriors figuring in the combat. There was a full-dress rehearsal of the entire programme last night.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Adelaide Ganee, the dancer, added another novelty to the production of "The Soul Kiss" at the New York Theatre last night. Into the dressing-room scene of the second act she introduced a brief bit of the "Roger de Coverley" dance, which was one of her most lauded offerings at the Empire in London. She appeared in an old-fashioned costume, and was assisted by Mortimer Weldon in the cap and dotted garments of Piero.

"The Merry-Go-Round," the first musical offering of the Circle Production Company, with which the Circle is to reopen under the Isman management, will have its initial presentation on Saturday evening instead of next Monday, as last stated. The work of completing the alterations on the stage and the redecorating in the auditorium has been completed sooner than expected.

"FAKERS" HAVE FUN WITH ACADEMICIANS

SOME STARTLING EFFECTS

Sargent, Henry W. Watrous, and George Bellows Among Those Whose Work Is Produced.

The Society of American Fakers began its annual frolic yesterday at the Art Students' League, 215 West Fifty-seventh Street, and it will continue until Friday evening, closing with the grand costume ball and Art Students' Mardi Gras. In the meantime the exhibition of fake pictures, inspired by those in the exhibition of the National Academy, will be held daily.

On the walls of the stairway leading to the floors of the league black cats are gamboling, and the sign, "Look Out for the Scissors Man," points the way to the "Latin Quarter" and a "Street of Old Paris," where one may have one's fortune told. The "Scissors Man" will cut a true portrait silhouette in a jiffy; there are sketches and posters to buy, and in the Café des Beaux Arts, where little French maids wait on one and a vaudeville show is presented afternoon and evening. In the "Latin Quarter" are a couple of pictures, a still life by William M. Chase and a water color by F. Luis Mora, which are being sold on chances at 50 cents a chance.

In the Fakers' Gallery the pictures and posters are already adorned with the marks of approval of the exhibition jury, some for prizes and others for honorable mention, and on Thursday evening there will be the annual auction, and the fakes and posters will be sold for the benefit of scholarships for the league.

There is much work in relief in the pictures, and one of the effective bits is the take-off upon George Bellows's "42 Kids." In the original the youngsters in various stages of undress are bathing, some going in and others just leaving the water. In the faker's picture the "kids" are all in the water with only the soles of their feet showing on top of the breaking waves, while a beautiful blue "cop" stands just outside the painting in a threatening attitude.

The title of one portrait in the National Academy exhibition puzzled the visitors. It was a much-admired portrait of a young woman in a green gown with flowing lines, and was called "The Breaker." The Faker who chose this picture to parody has attempted an explanation. A woman is lounging in a wicker chair. Her face is flushed, and broken glasses and bottles are at her feet. Another bottle, in her hand, is apparently about to go the same way.

There are different reproductions of the Harry W. Watrous picture "A Cup of Tea, a Cigarette, and She." In one "She" is sitting much in the attitude of the original picture, with the cigarette in one hand, that hand and arm being in relief and moving with cords hanging below the picture, which allow the lady to raise and lower her cigarette in a delightfully realistic maniner. A tiny portrait with a large frame in the Academy is represented here by a postage stamp inclosed in a foot-wide band of pretzels.

These are a few of the fakes, and they are all worth seeing. The catalogues of "Des Lustige Fakir, the Nineteenth Annual Soul Kiss," will be sold at 25 cents a copy as long as they last.

Theodore Roosevelt

Studied in the

White House

The only description ever given of the most wonderful scene in the world—the passing of statesmen and private citizens, corporation Presidents and workmen through the Executive Office, and the way they are dealt with by the most striking personality of modern times.

In the preparation of this article the author spent a number of days watching the progress of Executive business at the White House. His conclusions concerning the President are in some respects astonishing. The article is a document of first importance. It will appear in full in

By W. J. LAMPTON.

Given a circus in Brooklyn on the same day and date that a game of ball is booked and it is a safe bet to lay your money on the circus to get the full house. When to the circus is added a sign of rain matters rapidly grow worse. Yesterday there was a circus and several signs of rain, and Brooklyn took to the tents. Anyway, a baseball field is no place to pasture baby carriages. So it came to pass that at the second of the series between the Giants and the Suburbas, alias the Superbas, if there were any speculators outside the gates trying to gather in a harvest off the game hunters they didn't. That's all. But around the corner where the circus was blowing off, well, if a wild trolley car had torn through the throng there would have been a call for little white hearses that couldn't have been met, and there was a reason. However, about 7,000 patriots got in, and, though the Brooklyn breezes weren't exactly tropical, they handed out some enthusiasm that was almost warm, but there wasn't much of it. The new stand over in the far corner at a quarter per seemed to be doing the business. The higher-grade bleachers got their benches only about half up, and in the grand stand there weren't enough Merry Widow hats to show that Sring had come within miles of the place. It was not ladies' day for a certainty.

A little touch of pathos showed in the half-masted flag for Harry Chadwick, the "Father of Baseball." A home run for him after fourscore years, and as he lay dead in the harness not a player on the field was old enough to remember when the "father of the game" first dandled his offspring on the diamond.

The Giants got the first call to the stick with Napoleon Bonaparte Rucker before the batters and Bergen behind. Rucker hands the balls up with his left and Bergen takes them in with both. Umpire Emslie seemed to be in the way most of the time. He only looked that way. The Giants didn't get much of anything out of their first half except themselves. Shannon made a grand-stand play for a starter and roofed the ball. Before the game was over enough balls went up there to warrant organizing a new department for the game. Either that and put a man there, or have a ball-bearing roof, so that they will roll off easier. After Shannon had balled the roof up two or three times he got one headed out the other way, and Alperman put it in his pocket. Tenney came along next with a nice little one that Lewis didn't know what to do with, and Mr. Tenney left home for first and stayed there. Donlin followed, and after a roofer put one over among the bleachers to right; he went to first, and Tenney didn't get to second. Shannon died there, and Donlin went to sleep somewhere en route. Be that as it may, the inning ended at this point, with no runs, and the Suburbas got hold of the stick, with Dummy Taylor in the middle of the ring and Bresnahan to take 'em when they came his way.

Pattee led, but not far. He didn't get to first, though he made a try for it on a small margin. Maloney banged one over at the right and got as far as first safely. The squeeze got him between first and second. Burch walloped the little wad of yarn out to left centre and took two bags as a reward of merit. Jordan hit the atmosphere two times, so the umpire said, and then blew a long fly out to Shannon, who didn't seem to need it in his business and let it go. Jordan went on to second, and Burch romped in under the wire. First tally of the game. Loud applause, but not from the Manhattan rooters. Alperman batted the atmosphere three times and took the count.

Seymour started the next inning and got to first on an earth scraper. Bresnahan passed a juicy insect to Burch, and he took it easy. Devlin rocketed one skyward and was safe because it landed too close to the bleacher barricade for anybody to take hold of it till it stopped rolling. Then he accepted first on called balls. Nicklin sent one up on the roof and got safe to first on called balls. Bases were full now for the first time. Nobody else full on the grounds. Bridwell sent a low one over to Pattee, which he gobbled handsome. It was a clear case of Pattee de fly grass. Taylor went out on strikes and said a word. No rece, and side out.

Hummel (not Abe) didn't do a thing but take first on balls. It was dead easy. Lewis didn't get to first, but Hummy made second. Tenney and Taylor were too many for the Suburba S. S. Bergen tried to pop over to first, but Bridwell objected. Hummy went along to third. Easy going. Rucker gave Seymour a chance to show what he could do with a long fly, and Seymour showed him all right. Three out; side out; n r.

Shannon went out at first so quick it made the bleachers red in the face. Bridwell did it. Tenney flew out like a bird on the wing, and Donlin fanned the circumambient atmosphere three times too many. Quick action. No runs. The Suburbas didn't do anything but one, two, threed it to a finish.

The fourth inning opened like the rest, but acted different before it was over. Seymour got to first on a low cut. Bresnahan got in a liner and went to first. Devlin lost out at bat. Nicklin came along to first and the others moved up a peg apiece, filling the bases. Bleachers began to draw long breaths and gurgle deep down with joy. Lewis didn't handle Bridwell's knock right, and Brid got first, Seymour getting home. Taylor made a first get-away, and pushed Bresnahan off. Shannon hit her up enough to bring in Nicklin and Bridwell. Then Tenney offered a foul to Bergen, who picked it clean and Donlin used force on Taylor. All out for four runs. Warm times among the bleachers, but not Brooklyn bleachers. They said it looked like ball playing. The Suburbas lacked four runs of making as many as the Giants in their half and Brooklyn began to get purple around the peep-holes.

Five more innings followed, nine innings to a game, you know, unless there's a tie and you get more than you pay for, and not much was doing. O course everybody played his part, and hit the ball and didn't hit, and caught flies and didn't, and banged around like they always do in ball games, but what's the use of talking about it? Nobody made any more runs, and when nobody makes runs in baseball games why talk about nothing? A whole string of nothings, in fact.

In the fifth, Ames relieved Taylor in the box, but there was no especial relief that anybody could notice. It wasn't any relief to the Suburbas, anyhow. They kept on getting nothings to add to nothing. What could be written of them after the first inning should be in cipher most appropriately. Still they played well enough to keep the Giants on the same sort of diet, all except that break in the fourth, when the luck came just right. Nobody knows how it happens that way and as far as science is concerned it might just as well have happened to Brooklyn as it did to New York. Being visitors at Brooklyn, makes the Suburbas feel less hurt about it, because they are very hospitable people in Brooklyn.

After the game the house was emptied in five minutes, and the sandwich man who went about shrieking: "Here's yer Brooklyn brewed sandwiches!" looked as lonesome as Brooklyn on Sunday. More scrapping this afternoon at the same time and place. Go early and avoid the rush.

Score—Giants, 4; Suburbas, 1. Time—1 hour 40 minutes, Brooklyn time.

DONLIN AND STAHL FINED.

New York Players Each Assessed $100 for Playing with "Outlaw" Clubs.

CINCINNATI, April 20.—The National Baseball Commission to-day reinstated Players Garland Stahl of the New York Americans and M. J. Donlin of the New York Nationals, but fined each $100 for ing participated in certain games with clubs or against clubs harboring ineligible players in Chicago during last season. Because of the questions raised, the commission gives warning that in the future no National agreement player will at any time be permitted to play with or against any club harboring any ineligible player.

The commission announces that there is no objection on the part of the commission to players participating in exhibition games, either before or after the close of the season, in the respective league to which the clubs belong that have title to them, but in no instance can they participate in games with clubs or against clubs harboring ineligible players. A violation of this order at any time in future will be followed by a fine of not less than $250 against each player for the first offense.

NEW YORKER WINS BOSTON MARATHON

T. P. Morrissey of Mercury A. C. Takes 25-Mile Race by 50 Yards.

J. J. HAYES, I. A. A. C., SECOND

100,000 Persons Line Streets of Boston and Cheer New York Runners as They Win Chief Honors.

BOSTON, April 20.—T. P. Morrissey of the Mercury Athletic Club, New York City, to-day won the twelfth annual renewal of the Boston Athletic Association Marathon road race, covering the twenty-five miles from Ashland to the finish mark on Exeter Street in 2:25:43 1-5. The time is second only to the record of 2:24:24, made last year by Tom Longboat, the Canadian Indian runner. Fifty yards in the rear of Morrissey came J. J. Hayes of the Irish-American Athletic Club, New York City, who, in turn, led Robert A. Fowler of the Cambridgeport Gymnasium Association, by about the same distance. Hayes's time was 2:26:4, while Fowler took 2:26:42. Following in order were:

Runners and Club.	Time.
M. J. Ryan, Irish-American A. C.	2:27:08
George Brown, Nashua, N. H.	2:27:48
J. J. Lee, Boston A. A., Boston	2:28:34
Fred Lorz, Mohawk A. C., New York	2:52:20
S. Mellor, Mercury A. C., New York	2:41:17
C. R. Welton, Lawrence	2:43:25
J. J. Goff, Cambridge Gym. A.	2:43:53
C. Andrews, Xavier A. C., New York	2:44:10
R. X. Wentworth, Lynn, Mass.	2:44:31
A. Halsted, Lawrence, Mass.	2:45:10
C. Henry, Lynn, Mass.	2:45:27
J. F. Marshall, Marlboro, Mass.	2:45:51

Morrissey ran a wonderful race, following out a plan carefully mapped out. He was never out of striking distance of the veteran runners, and when the race was half run his reserve strength began to tell. His long strides took him up to even terms with the leaders, and swinging along to the finish he began to sprint, soon leaving Hayes and Fowler in the rear, and crossing the finish line an easy victor.

The weather conditions were ideal for fast time when the contestants, 120 in number, lined up in Ashland, ready to start on their journey of a trifle more than twenty-five miles to Boston. A fresh wind was blowing out of the northwest, right at the runners' backs, and although a light snow fell for a few minutes, it soon turned to rain, which refreshed the competitors and laid the dust along the course.

Every man had been examined by physicians and pronounced fit to attempt the long run, which, as an Olympic tryout, afforded the judges an opportunity to select some of the men who will journey to London and represent this country in the Olympic games.

The crowd of nearly a hundred thousand persons which had stood in the rain for nearly two hours to witness the finish held their positions on Exeter Street and Commonwealth Avenue until the last runner had crossed the line.

Nearly all of the men finished in good shape, although some fell across the line exhausted. They were speedily revived in the clubhouse.

J. P. Morrissey is a newcomer in the ranks of long-distance runners. Up to the beginning of last Winter he was little known, although he had represented the Mercury Athletic Club of Yonkers in several mile races. After running with fair success in local cross-country events, he attracted notice by finishing eighth in the Mott Haven A. C. run in a field of over 100 starters. He won several club and handicap runs at Yonkers, and was twentieth in the junior Metropolitan A. A. N. cross-country championship.

His best previous performance was in the 25-mile indoor run in the National Athletic Culb arena, which he won in splendid style, finishing in 2:54:55, less than two minutes slower than the record for the distance, which has stood for nearly twenty years. Morrissey "killed off" E. P. Carr, W. G. Frank, Fred Lorz, and other long-distance performers and compelled them to quit before the fifteenth mile. He then went on practically alone, winning by nearly a mile.

Holy Cross Blanks Fordham.

Special to The New York Times.

WORCESTER, Mass., April 20.—Holy Cross, before a crowd of 5,000 persons on Fitton Field this afternoon, starting in a downpour of rain, evened up for the defeat at Fordham's hands in New York last week by shutting out the New York team. The score was 4 to 0. Dowd had the better of the pitchers' battle, having eleven strike outs to his credit. Fordham played hard, but was never in the running, Dowd having wonderful control when in tight places. The score:

TO BREAK WESTON'S RECORD.

But Pedestrian Beaudin Is About Fagged Out After First Day's Walk.

NEWBURYPORT, Mass., April 20.—Arsene Beaudin of Adams, Mass., who started from Portland at midnight to walk to Chicago, in an effort to lower the record of Edward Payson Weston, arrived in Newburyport about 10 o'clock to-night. The distance from Portland to this city is seventy-seven miles. Beaudin was very tired upon reaching here and fell asleep in a chair in a newspaper office, where he went to report himself. He announced, however, his intention of starting again at 4 o'clock to-morrow morning to cover a stretch of sixty miles, which will take him twenty miles beyond Boston.

As Beaudin had no money, he did not to a hotel, but was allowed to sleep at the police station. His arrival here was greatly in contrast with that of Weston. The latter was met by a crowd of young people, who escorted him into the city, while the arrival of young Beaudin was practically unnoticed.

Washington made a desperate effort to overhaul the Yankees in the eighth inning of yesterday's game at the American League Park, but after the smoke had cleared the Senators were still one run behind, which relative position was maintained until the end of the game, the final score being 4 to 3 in favor of New York. The only satisfaction the visiting players had was that they knocked Doyle out of the box, which at the best was cold comfort. Two pitchers were used by each team, and but for the fact that Chesbro stopped the flow of the Senators hits the visitors might have squeezed out a victory.

The slugging began early. Gehring lasted one inning, during which he gave unmistakable evidence of lack of control of the ball. He retired in favor of Cates, who went along well enough up to the fifth inning, when he, too, went up in the air, but steadied down in the last four innings and finished under double wraps. Doyle, fresh from his victory over the Athletics last week, performed the slab duties for the Yankees until trouble was threatened in the eighth, when Chesbro was substituted as a life-saver.

MR. GOMPERS'S MISTAKE.

Mr. GOMPERS is an able exhorter, an efficient labor chief, but a poor politician. A little inquiry and observation would teach him that politics is divided into two departments—one is to declare principles, the other to get the offices. Getting the offices is nine-tenths of the game. Mr. GOMPERS is not after the offices as an end, only as a means. He wants Congressmen and Senators elected who will exempt labor from the operation of the Anti-Trust act, and, poor deluded man, he thinks organized labor can accomplish this by itself. Mr. GOMPERS ought to see that his pathway to success lies through an alliance between the Labor Trust and the Trusts of capitalism. They have a common interest, they ought to make a common cause. In union there is strength.

There is no room for doubt as to the identity of their interests. Mr. GOMPERS has many times made it plain, and, in particular, he showed in his speech at the Grand Central Palace on Sunday evening that the community of interest between his Trust and the other Trusts is unmistakable. He wants Presidents, Representatives, and Senators, "and such other executive, legislative, or judicial candidates as will safeguard and protect the common interests of the wageworkers." Mr. COAKLEY, who filled in the time until the arrival of Mr. GOMPERS, declared that the Supreme Court had taken away from the trades unions their greatest weapon, the right of boycott and blacklist. It was the Supreme Court, too, that by its interpretations of the law took away from the great capitalistic combinations some of their precious rights, such as the rebate, discriminating charges, and the merger in restraint of trade. He protests that the boycott, which is human and humane, cannot except by unlawful interpretation be classed as illegal and improper. That is precisely the attitude of the Trusts toward the court. Mr. GOMPERS showed that he had the right idea in his mind when he asserted that the court had put organized labor in the same position as the Trusts. He was "getting warm," as the children say. If his mind had been open to the appeals of logic and practical politics alike, he would then and there have proclaimed the alliance between the two kinds of Trusts.

They are asking for the same thing—the right to restrain trade for their own gain. The things they ask for have always been illegal. Organized labor has never had the right by the boycott to ruin a man's business, any more than combinations of capital have had the right to practice extortion. No moral considerations, no mawkish scruples of conscience, no obstructive principles stand in the way on either side. The protected interests would welcome the alliance, and they are powerful. The railroads, of course, would come in, and the great industrial combinations, with their keen-minded and far-sighted managers, would not hold aloof. Mr. GOMPERS can with a word pledge labor to the union.

Then they could take the field with some hope. Organized, coherent, cherishing a common purpose, and inspired by the practical certainty of a common reward, they would accomplish prodigies in the coming campaign. There would be nobody against them but the consumers and the small producers, who, after all, are only made to be plucked. It is astonishing that Mr. GOMPERS is so shortsighted.

RUSSIANIZING OUR TRUSTS.

A current telegram from Russia calls attention to the fact that Russia now enjoys the trust license system which is proposed for the United States. It is announced that the Octobrists will interpellate the Government regarding the Metallurgical Trust, which comprises almost exactly the proportion of the Russian trade which our Steel Trust controls. The allegation is that this Russian trust will drive outsiders into bankruptcy.

[illegible] our trust has done nothing of the sort. Rather the shoe is on the other foot, for our trust accepted lower prices than the independents during the boom, and is at the moment losing trade to independent price cutters. Still the Duma is afraid of their trust, and will ask what arrangements are proposed "to protect independents and to prevent the raising of prices."

The answer suggested by our experience is to enact that trusts shall be good trusts, or, in other words, to authorize reasonable and beneficial restraints of trade, and to penalize only them. But Russia has already tried and dislikes the license system: "Russia already has legislation against combinations in restraint of trade, but syndicates subject to Government regulation are permitted."

Many Americans will agree that the common-law method of restraining prejudicial combinations of either labor or capital—by indictment and conviction by a petit jury—is better than the imperialist method proposed for this Republic, after having given dissatisfaction in the realms of the Czar.

METROPOLITAN HISTORY.

A new and much-needed addendum to the complex history of the surface railways of Manhattan is supplied by two things that come to the public knowledge this morning: One is the Grand Jury's report that it finds no evidence of crime in the financing of the Metropolitan system, no grounds for indictment against its managers. The other is Mr. RYAN's statement setting forth in detail the various steps taken in uniting the many corporations controlling street railway franchises in New York into one great system.

Mr. RYAN asserts, and presents in brief the details of the successive transactions to support his assertion, that there was no gross overcapitalization and stock watering, no "looting" of the system by "insiders," no fraud upon the public by the issue of securities already robbed of their value by manipulation and chicane. The people of New York and of the country have for months been fed upon sensational stories of flagitious practices by the Metropolitan management. It is well that these stories should be tested soberly by comparison with Mr. RYAN's statement.

It is interesting to observe that Mr. RYAN's statement of the cause of the present difficulties of the Metropolitan system accords very closely with that recently made by Mr. IVINS. Free transfers, a system as to the adoption of which it must be said that the managers of the surface railways are in some measure responsible; the great increase in taxes, and the laying of the special franchise tax; the congestion of street traffic, which has enormously increased the cost of operation and maintenance while at the same time diminishing the efficiency and earning power of the surface system; the burden of accident liabilities; and, finally, the competition of the subway lines built with the city's money—these causes, for none of which except for transfers the managers of the system can be held responsible, have reduced the earnings by fully six millions a year, in Mr. RYAN's judgment, or more than 10 per cent. upon the company's capital stock.

The bearing of the Grand Jury's report upon the proceeding against Mr. JEROME is obvious. It is also obvious that the interests of the community would now be better served by giving attention to the reorganization of the surface railway system rather than by further exploration of its past history.

THE TURKISH-ITALIAN AFFAIR.

The yielding by Turkey to the demands of Italy, under a threat that force would be used, has its chief interest in the evidence it affords that the European Concert sustained Italy. Otherwise Italy would not have ventured on a step that could only mean war, in case Turkey remained firm. On the other hand Turkey would not have given in unless convinced that Italy would have a free hand. Isolated occurrences of this sort are by no means unprecedented, and they always end in the same way. The Sultan constantly goes as far as he is permitted to go and no further, though he uses the utmost resources of an extraordinarily able diplomacy to play the Powers of Europe against each other that he may have as long a tether as possible.

Meanwhile the incident throws some light on the far wider and very important question of Macedonia and the still wider one of the whole "Near East." When a few months since Austria announced that she had obtained from the Sublime Porte concessions for a railway that would cut across and interfere with another planned by Russia, Russia vigorously protested, and for a time it seemed that the Concert was in danger. At that moment it was supposed that Germany would support the claims of Austria, that they would be opposed by Russia, France, Great Britain, and probably by Italy. On the heels of this disturbance followed the propositions of Great Britain as to the reform of the police of Macedonia, by putting the maintenance of peace in the hands of a Turkish Governor General, approved by the Powers and removable only by their consent. This was rather abruptly declined by Germany, and was only partly sustained by Russia, while it was politely waived aside by France. Nothing came of it, and apparently Great Britain is the only Power interested in any serious change in Macedonia, where conditions are of the worst. The result of the Italian threat against Turkey, in the light of all these complications, indicates that the Powers are willing to permit single and unrelated acts of compulsion toward Turkey in matters of no great intrinsic importance, but that they are entirely unable to agree upon a united policy in matters of real concern.

The Sultan probably cares very little whether he has to permit the Italians to open Post Offices in four or five ports, or pay for a murdered priest, or settle the claims of a French exploiting company, while he must care a good deal whether he is practically forced to surrender direct control of his remaining European provinces until European and infidel influence prevails close up to the walls of Constantinople. He may even argue that each of these minor concessions strengthens him in his resistance to any demand for substantial reform in his oppressed and desolated possessions on the Continent of Europe. Whether that be the case or not, it is plainly true that he is quite strong enough to prevail in this resistance for the present. His strength lies in the disunion of the Powers, and in that alone. It is generally admitted that the European provinces of Turkey cannot be decently governed without the practical annulment of Turkish authority. The Powers could accomplish this in a month if they could agree as to what is to come after. That as yet they cannot do. The most that at present can be hoped for, seemingly, is that they will keep the peace between themselves.

THE BUSINESS OF NEWS GETTING.

The two great organizations concerned in the making of the American newspaper hold their annual meetings in New York this week. The Associated Press, which comprises in its membership 774 newspapers, and is an institution with extraordinary and wide-reaching ramifications, employing correspondents all over the habitable globe, and carrying on successfully an immense volume of business, meets here to-day. To-morrow the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, which concerns itself only with the business and technical details of newspaper making, will meet. This body has now 275 members, about 250 of whom are members also of The Associated Press. Its annual meetings have been held hitherto in February, and the date was changed to April only last year, when The Associated Press changed the date of its annual meeting from September. This happy design enables the bodies to unite at a banquet to-morrow night.

The enormous growth and prosperity of the newspaper business in this country is as largely due to the able management of these two associations as to the skill and enterprise of their individual members. The Associated Press, particularly, which was never in a more thriving condition than at present, is a remarkable example of the value of efficient co-operation. Based primarily on the idea of an exchange of news between journals in various localities, it has developed into the most effective and best-managed agency for the collection and distribution of authentic news in the world. Its prosperity is a matter of the greatest interest to all newspaper readers, and in tendering our congratulations to the managers of The Associated Press, we feel that we are expressing the feelings of the whole country.

FATHER OF BASEBALL.

HENRY CHADWICK has been called the Father of Baseball for many years, not because he invented the game, though he assisted materially in its gradual evolution, in the first half of the last century, from the simple old game of town ball, the "one-old-cat" and "three-old-cat" of the early boyhood of men now aged. Mr. CHADWICK had fostered, encouraged, and helped to develop baseball through more than half a century, and for more than half that time had been the editor of the Official Guide. He believed in the efficacy and good moral influence of hearty outdoor sports, and for the full measure of his active life had devoted himself zealously as a newspaper writer to increasing the public interest in them.

To be known as the Father of Baseball is no empty honor. Mr. CHADWICK has passed away, in his eighty-third year, at the beginning of a new season of outdoor sports, when it seems that many men in the community, in common with many of the women and children, are more interested in baseball than in any other subject under the sun. Everybody that knows much about baseball knows all about CHADWICK. His influence has been measurable in eliminating rowdyism and gambling from the game. He was an acknowledged authority on all its technicalities. He invented the approved system of scoring. He had written enough about the game, wisely and clearly, to fill many volumes. To the very end of his life he attended baseball matches and vigorously expressed his opinion of the play; and his opinion counted. So that it may well be said of CHADWICK that he died full of years and honors. He helped to make baseball a National game, and as it is a game worthy of that honor, he accomplished something in his life worth remembering.

Early games of baseball are recorded as far back as 1831. But it was not until 1845 that the first baseball club was organized, the Knickerbockers, and the game they played was a crude development of town ball. The National Baseball Association of amateur clubs was formed fifty-one years ago. The first professional baseball players were the Red Stockings of Cincinnati, organized in 1868. Mr. CHADWICK was more or less concerned in all these early developments, while he was prominent in the organization of the game in the last thirty years.

The college sport most popular with spectators and newspapers, namely, football, is the least useful of all the games.—President ELIOT's ultimatum.

He [THEODORE ROOSEVELT] reiterated substantially the view that to object to athletic sports, including football, is to be a "mollycoddle."—News Item.

Football is as checkers compared with the strife of these two distinguished advocates.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Heavily Taxed by Fire. A striking statement in the report prepared for The Engineering News by H. M. WILSON on the annual destruction of property by fire in this country is to the effect that our annual losses of that kind amount to more than the value of all the gold, silver, and coal we produce. That is somehow more impressive than the assertion that our fire loss imposes an annual tax of $2.47 upon every man, woman, and child in the United States, even though that does exceed by $2.14 the average tribute paid to the "fire fiend" in the six chief countries of Europe.

Certainly it is an enormous drain, even upon a country of such resources as ours, and the humiliating thing about it is that at least a half, and probably a much larger fraction, of this loss is unnecessary, and both could and would be avoided if we made intelligent use of the building materials at our command. That we are an especially reckless and extravagant people, however, is easier to say than to prove, and it is not demonstrated by the superiority of foreigners in this respect as shown by the comparative fire records.

Their buildings are less combustible than ours, not because they are wiser or more farsighted than we, but because with them it has been many a century, instead of only a few years, since they had cheap lumber in apparently inexhaustible quantities.

But, of course, our fire loss is altogether too large, even after every excuse has been made for it, and we are at least beginning to do better—under the usual compulsion. Each great conflagration results in the substitution of fireproof or slow-burning buildings for most of the old tinderboxes, and ultimate saving is more and more receiving consideration as against immediate economy. The insurance companies, too, by penalizing unsafe construction are doing something to help along the reform, though they might do more without doing what, from their point of view, would be too much—that is, ruining the fire insurance business by forcing everybody to put up buildings that wouldn't burn and so would make insurance unnecessary.

More Cars Than Enough! Three New York street car lines, if their managers obey the orders of the Public Service Commission, will, hereafter, provide all through the day and night, except at the "rush hours," 10 per cent. more seats than there are passengers, and other lines, according to rumor, are soon to receive the same command! Seeing will be believing for New Yorkers in this matter, and it is doubtful if they will at once believe even their eyes if those organs are called upon to report that the transportation officials have at last abandoned their ideal system, which has always been to run just enough cars to accommodate the traffic—when densely crowded.

Those officials have so often declared with the utmost solemness that this was the best they could possibly do, and that more cars would only delay the service, that most of us have come to accept these statements as at least approximately true and the hope of having seats enough has been almost abandoned. As for having more than seats enough, except when "going against the current" at those same rush hours, that seems like a dream. The Commissioners apparently consider it within the realm of the realizable, however, and we will all vehemently hope that they are right.

Of course, the new order of the commission will not be obeyed, or at any rate it will not long be obeyed, if it makes the companies run at an actual loss or if the increased number of cars diminishes the speed of transit and decreases the whole number of passengers carried. Any of these results may follow, so far as most people know, but perhaps the Commissioners are better informed. Certainly there are new ideas nowadays as to the basis on which urban transportation companies should adjust their capital and distribute their income, and that may materially affect the question of profit and loss. On the other hand, the Public Service Commission can, if it chooses, do much toward securing to the companies the approach to clear tracks which would so much facilitate their operations and add so much to the general convenience.

Ten cars in motion are better than fifteen standing still, but, as was demonstrated not long ago, not all street car delays, by any means, are due to the truckman who will not get out of the way. Rolling stock out of repair has been the cause of many a blockade. And certainly there are lines on which, even in existing conditions, it would be easy to run more cars. Seventh Avenue is now practically wasted, so far as helping to solve the city's transportation problem, and it is a nice, broad street, too, not to speak of its passing on one side of the Times Building, which gives us a special interest in its possibilities.

More Neat Than Significant. To say that "the United States is governed by politicians, England by public-spirited amateurs, and Germany by experts," is to make a pretty phrase, and no doubt the somewhat mysterious JOHN P. FOX of Boston, who achieved it at the last talkfest in the Church of the Ascension, regards it as a neat little thing. Well, it is, and true in a way, at that, but like all such smooth generalizations it seems to mean more than it does.

Mr. FOX's apparent assumption that the United States is worse governed by its politicians than England by its public-spirited amateurs—he referred to unpaid officials and legislators, no doubt—and that Germany's experts are better than either, could undoubtedly be defended in detail, and by comparing their best with our worst. On the whole, however, we have been and are getting along not so ill, and there are in both England and Germany not a few—several million, indeed—impassioned critics of the systems by which those countries are ruled.

According to some accounts, the public-spirited amateurs of England are not too unselfish, despite their willingness to hold unsalaried offices, to look out rather carefully and effectively for the interests of their own class as against those of other classes, while the experts in Germany have been known to make decidedly grave mistakes occasionally, and their manners are not always such as to endear them to the populace.

That we have many lessons to learn from "abroad" is a fact, and the sooner we set about the learning the better, but our ways are not altogether bad—for useless would we surely have had others long ago. There isn't much emigration from the United States to either England or Germany, and there's quite a current the other way. That's more significant, after all, that differences of administration, which may be differences of name more than of anything else.

"FESTIVE" JAMES FISK.

Was Passed Over in the List of Brattleborough's Sons.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Probably not one of the unfortunate individuals not to the Green Mountains born could begin to comprehend the expanding of certain organs, held in place by the average diaphram, while reading the fluent expounding of Vermont's greatness which appeared in THE TIMES of April 10, written by Henry Baldwin—probably of Vermont.

Every well-regulated Vermonter not given to brainstorms, will admit that Brattleborough has had its full share of native celebrities, but none to spare from its list of notabilities when compared with other Vermont towns equally favored, and the writer begs to advise the faithful recorder of greatness of an inadmissible omission: The failure to notice the unique glory belonging to Brattleborough of having produced the epigrammatic James Fisk, of lively memory, who in the course of very active connection with one of the most impressive leaders in our new school of finance, contributed many surprises in the way of joyous enlivenment for a class of enterprising citizens who thought they knew Wall Street, was a grave shortcoming—i. e., when considered in connection with historic completeness. In past days when the "Festive Fisk" was one of our most conspicuous metropolitan assets, there were an unappreciative and overparticular few who did not approve of his usual routine, but were compelled to admit that he furnished a daily programme composed of opera bouffe, display of a four-in-hand, all his own, heading of regimental marchings, new methods of running steamboats, financing railroads, and receiving missionaries, which while it amused the many, failed to bring rest to those innocents whose bank accounts his novel financial methods had forced to sudden, unexpected, and untimely transmissions to the capacious pockets of the unrepentant.

But as often before, the careless of New York looked on and were amused, while some laughed, others cried, nearly all swore, the whole paid, and all is forgotten save the sayings of the one who led the caperings.

RUSH C. HAWKINS.

New York, April 20, 1908.

CRAZE OF HOME OWNING.

To be Thought of Only When Prosperous and Sixty.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

This craze of home owning is widespread, and is especially rampant among naturalized Americans. It is one of the first impulses that they get after reaching this country. The reason is clear. The possibilities of home owning on the Continent are remote, with the result that the ownership of a home is a cherished longing. They perceive that such ownership is possible in this country, and they set about it actively, securing it eventually at great personal sacrifice and probable extinction of freedom. The children of many a family have grown up in want owing to the insatiable longing of the parents to own the home that they live in. They save nothing by it, but on the other hand run the risk of incumbering themselves with unsalable property. They have the delusion that they are not paying rent; but they are paying rent and probably more than they can afford.

The advice that I would give is to select a house or flat well within one's means and put the balance of the savings regularly in the bank. If an opportunity in another part of the country then comes one will not find his movements hampered by the necessity of maintaining an unprofitable investment. The American people are esentially nomadic. They cannot be otherwise, with new regions to exploit, new towns to found, and new opportunities to grasp.

Take the advice of one who has passed the allotted years of threescore and ten and who has been a home owner ever since he was twenty-three, discarding from time to time what appeared to be perfectly satisfactory when it was bought, and usually, interest computed, at a loss. It is my firm conviction that no man should own his own home until he has prosperously passed the age of sixty years.

AUGUST VAN DYCK.

Cleveland, Ohio, April 16, 1908.

SUGGESTS AUGUSTUS THOMAS.

His Qualifications for Directorship of New Theatre Discussed.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is strange that no one has mentioned the name of Augustus Thomas as a choice for the position of director of the New Theatre, possibly because the public knows him only as a playwright. But actors and the theatrical profession generally regard Mr. Thomas as one of the ablest stage directors in this country; in rehearsing and in general stage directing he has few equals anywhere.

Presumably the general conduct of affairs of the New Theatre will rest in other hands than those of the acting director; but if one man must bear the entire responsibility it is by no means certain that Mr. Thomas would not be able to do so with credit to himself and to the institution.

He is a practical man of the theatre, with broad, general experiences; moreover, he is an American who has always been in close touch with National affairs. And it cannot be urged that he is in any sense the type of man who has become restricted by too close identification with the purely theatric side of life.

I believe that if the matter were submitted to actors and managers generally they would agree that, with Mr. Belasco and Mr. Miller out of the reckoning, no better man could be found for the post. As to whether Mr. Thomas would accept it, and what his views are generally upon the practicability of the entire scheme, the writer cannot say. But it would be interesting to hear from Mr. Thomas.

Park Tennis Courts.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I trust that you will find space to print these few words of protest against the condition of the tennis courts in Central Park.

These courts, in season, are a source of pleasure and of good, healthful, out-of-doors exercise to hundreds, if not thousands, of people from all parts of the borough, and are, without doubt, the worst kept courts in any of the parks of all the boroughs.

It would seem that, if these courts can be put in fair condition with a comparatively small sum of money, such funds would surely be well spent.

NINETY-FOURTH STREET.

New York, April 18, 1908.

Sallie Waterses.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

After all, is it not a fortunate misfortune that there are some capable, active women in the world without homes of their own to claim their best energies? What about the women who have time because they have no home duties to help and to lift those who have "no claim" upon them—or upon any one else?

The Price of Gold.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

While reading the very able article by Mr. Moreton Frewen in this morning's issue, the question arose in my mind as follows: Gold regulates the price of everything—what regulates the price of gold?

MR. TESLA'S VISION.

How the Electrician's Lamp of Aladdin May Construct New Worlds.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

From a report in your issue of March 11, which escaped my attention, I notice that some remarks I made on the occasion referred to have been misunderstood. Allow me to make a correction.

When I spoke of future welfare I meant that it would be conducted by direct application of electrical waves without the use of aerial engines or other implements of destruction. This means, as I pointed out, would be ideal, for not only would the energy of war require no effort for the maintenance of its potentiality, but it would be productive in times of peace. This is not a dream. Even now wireless power plants could be constructed by which any region of the globe might be rendered uninhabitable without subjecting the population of other parts to serious danger or inconvenience.

What I said in regard to the greatest achievement of the man of science, whose mind is bent upon the mastery of the physical universe, was nothing more than what I stated in one of my unpublished addresses, from which I quote: "According to an adopted theory, every ponderable atom is differentiated from a tenuous fluid, filling all space merely by spinning motion, as a whirl of water in a calm lake. By being set in movement this fluid, the ether, becomes gross matter; its movement arrested, the primary substance reverts to its normal state. It appears, then, possible for man through harnessed energy of the medium and suitable agencies for starting and stopping ether whirls to cause matter to form and disappear. At his command, almost without effort on his part, old worlds would vanish and new ones would spring into being. He could alter the size of this planet, control its seasons, adjust its distance from the sun, guide it on its eternal journey along any path he might choose, through the depths of the universe. He could make planets collide and produce his suns and stars, his heat and light; he could originate life in all its infinite forms. To cause at will the birth and death of matter would be man's grandest deed, which would give him the mastery of physical creation, make him fulfill his ultimate destiny."

Nothing could be further from my thought than to call wireless telephony around the world "the greatest achievement of humanity," as reported. This is a feat which, however stupefying, can be readily performed by any expert. I have myself constructed a plant for this very purpose. The wireless wonders are only seeming, not results of exceptional skill, as popularly believed. The truth is the electrician has been put in possession of a veritable lamp of Aladdin. All he has to do is to rub it. Now, to rub the lamp of Aladdin is no achievement.

If you are desirous of hastening the accomplishment of still greater and further-reaching wonders you can do no better than by emphatically opposing any measure tending to interfere with the free commercial exploitation of water power and the wireless art. So absolutely does human progress depend on the development of these that the smallest impediment, particularly through the legislative bodies of this country, may set back civilization and the cause of peace for centuries.

"MENTAL DYSPEPTIC" REPLIES.

Gives Account of His Daily Diet of Newspapers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

E. Landau's prescription for my case of "mental dyspepsia" is instructive, if not in the present instance applicable. He is, however, not to blame for that, in absence of the essential knowledge of what depends; although Mr. Landau might have observed that I submitted the question as one of possible general interest, not as a complaint.

If THE TIMES will grant the further space I will furnish some enlightenment.

First, I will eliminate two of the "seven" papers, by stating that those I look over at midday are merely early editions of those I read at night.

Next, beyond a cursory perusal of the news columns, with rigorous exclusion of "escapades," &c., my reading is mainly confined to the editorial page—the vitals, as it were, where is to be found a learned digest (no bouquets, Mr. Editor) of the world's news, with a usual accompaniment of interesting matter representing the ideas of the people themselves. In such circumstances the reading of one good paper only would manifestly be lacking in benefit, and would savor of a policy of intolerance of the views of others.

I possess a fair-sized library, composed principally of works of reference, and I love my books, but when I confess that my reading hours were formerly devoted largely to good fiction I somehow do not feel ashamed to add that I am content in my present affliction, indicative, as it seems to be, of a broader interest in topics of the times.

Would Defer Marriage.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Suppose the average young woman of to-day who marries a man making a salary of from $25 to $35 weekly goes to business herself. Now, should she be willing, where she is comfortable and making a good living, to give up her position even for the man she loves, and be in straitened circumstances all the rest of her life? Would it not be better for her and better for him if they each went their separate ways for a year or two, or even three, and in that way gathered a little together for the rainy day which is sure to come? After marriage we all know that in these times saving much on a limited amount is almost an impossibility.

Struck a Responsive Chord.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was intensely interested in Lurana W. Sheldon's letter in last Sunday's TIMES, stating her experience with various kinds of female and male laborers, and that although a verse writer by trade, she must blacken her own stove. Her letter very cleverly and graphically covers the whole situation. She is lucky if the stove is the only thing the scrub-lady leaves for her to do.

The Sacrilegious Buns.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I wish to uphold the hands of "One Who Cares" and protest against the silly and to me sacrilegious custom of making buns with the sign of the cross—buns eaten with rare exceptions without any deep sense of the meaning of that symbol that to many is sacred.

TRUTH AND FALSEHOOD.

Old Time was young, men's hearts were all untried
By Grief and Sin, when round this whirling ball
Pure Truth and Falsehood journeyed side by side
In free companionship. At evenfall
Of that long day which closed the Age of Gold
They came to Pleasure's lake, and both were glad
To cast their robes and seek those waters cold.
But Falsehood, first emerging, lightly clad
Her limbs in Truth's white garments, fresh and fair,
And swiftly fled away with mocking mirth;
While Truth, disdaining Falsehood's tattered wear,
Pursued. So still around the dizzy earth
Flies Falsehood, well-disguised in Truth's array,
While Truth runs after, naked to the day.

PAINTINGS SHOWN BY WOMEN ARTISTS

Notable Exhibition at Knoedler's Galleries in Oils, Water-Colors, and Pastels.

"EN FAMILLE" THE FAVORITE

Picture by Marion Powers Creates a Favorable Impression—Other Canvases Above Average Merit.

The exhibition of more than eighty pictures by women at the Knoedler Galleries is an interesting variation in the multiplicity of the season's art shows. About fifty artists are represented, and, of course, many more of equal merit are omitted, but the exhibition as a whole presents a dignified and engaging appearance. While there are no works of great originality, if we except Miss Powers's "En Famille," there are many that display careful workmanship and a personal point of view, and there are practically none that deserve to be classed with the nondescript "pot-boilers" which find their way into nearly all general exhibitions.

Figure and flower subjects are considerably in excess of the landscapes, but some of the latter have particular charm. Mrs. Coman, for example, shows two of her poetic interpretations of the Harlem valley seen from Quaker Hill, curiously gentle and poignant renderings of blue distances and flushed foregrounds in an atmosphere of fairyland yet not alien to the actual scene. Alice Mumford Roberts shows a study of cypress trees at Lake Como that is bold in composition and effective in color, the blue of the lake having a strong value against the heavy tone of the trees. Emma Lambert Cooper shows her "Canal at Lisieux," which was in the Pennsylvania Academy this Winter, and her "Crooked House," both fresh, spirited renderings of pleasantly pictorial material.

Content Johnson has a picture of oxen in which the light and shade are rather abruptly contrasted, but which shows good drawing in the animals. Matilda Browne, who is now exhibiting at the Georges Glaenzer Galleries, has a logging scene which lacks air; Anna Fisher's "Passing Shower" gives very successfully the sense of a wet atmosphere and drenched streets without the use of sharp reflections, and Mrs. Wyant's "Early June" is a delightful bit of nature artistically seen—a road climbing over a little hill, a fragment of exquisite sky and some trees of the tenderest green delicately silhouetted against it, the whole filled with the soft stirring of the air.

"The Shadow," by Ethelwyn Upton, takes its title from the shadow cast by a cypress tree on the blank wall of a white building. The painting is excellent and the effect a striking one. "Distant Dartmoor," by Althea Hill Platt; "In the Farm Garden," by Ella Condie Lamb; "An English Barnyard," by Anna Fisher; "Twilight, Beguinage, Bruges," by Brenetta H. Crawford, and "Moonlight, Devon," by Edith Penman, are other outdoor pictures worthy of note, and Bertha Saunders's "After the Rain" has a cool breeziness in its clear greys and greens that expresses the quality of a rain-washed landscape.

Many Portraits of Merit.

The portraits are numerous. That of Mrs. Wilfred Worcester, by Mary Foote, is a straighforward rendering of the character of the subject, and the different textures in the cloak, gown, and scarf are carefully discriminated. The "Portrait of an Aged Woman," by May Lewis Close, has subtle feeling, the pallor of the face not too strongly accentuated, the redness about the eyes, the faint constriction of the wrinkled lips, the slightly waxen texture of the skin, all the hints of extreme age are reticently yet definitely shown, and the total effect is one of sincere sentiment sincerely expressed.

A portrait of a child by Lydia Field Emmet is freshly natural and spontaneous, but one could wish for a flatter background than the vaporous screen and a simpler treatment of the floor. "The Mother and Child," by Janet Wheeler, would also have been better with a flatter background, but the figures are well drawn.

The "Portrait of Mrs. E. M. Townsend," by Amanda Brewster Sewall, shows the sitter in a fancy dress against the studio landscape of eighteenth century portraiture, the face is smoothly and quietly painted with rather hard contours, the figure has elegance, but the interest of the composition centres in the two delightful little dachshunds at the feet of the sitter, not so thoroughly characterized as they might have been, but refreshing in their aspect of life and liveliness.

"The Miniature Painter," by Ella Condie Lamb, has the air of portraiture, and of extremely good portraiture at that. One would go far to find a pleasanter translation of a frank personality than that firmly painted dark young face and strong young figure in its simple white dress against the white background. The management of the whites is interesting, and the canvas is rich in pictorial beauties. A "Child's Head," by Julia Dewey, has the same straightforward quality, with greater subtlety of color and a pensive charm of expression.

Among the subject pictures, "En Famille," by Marion Powers, makes altogether the deepest impression. The fine, free drawing, the beautiful modeling of the heads, and the rich color scheme would set it apart from even the best of the other paintings without taking into consideration the distinction of the composition. It is more clever than charming, no doubt, but its cleverness is wholesome and robust, and its masterly execution, without fumbling or weakness anywhere betrayed, communicates a pleasure that is too rare to be understated.

Other subject pictures that have individual qualities are "A Difficult Stitch," by Ella Richards; "The Good Story," by Clara McChesney; "Grandmother Sue," a child holding wide a checkered dress, very well drawn; "The Study Hour," by Alice Schille; "The Charity Soup Kitchen, Paris," by Eva M. Woolfolk, and a religious subject by Clara Burd.

The flower studies by Rhoda Holmes Nicholls and E. M. Scott are of a quality familiar to their public. The exhibition is open until May 2, inclusive.

Landscapes by Frank Fowler.

Frank Fowler's exhibition of studies and sketches at the Powell Art Gallery, 983 Sixth Avenue, shows an agreeable freshness in its flower and landscape subjects. Mr. Fowler paints country lanes and ancient houses with a charmingly quiet brush, giving a delicate sense of color. His big peonies are painted with breadth and boldness, but the crimson in them, while true to nature, is a difficult note in decoration.

In "The Old Morris Canal," the sense of solidity in the ground and the different planes of the landscape are skillfully suggested, and in all the outdoor pictures we are definitely in the open air. The gray skies loom perhaps a trifle heavily in one or two of the landscapes, but the general effect is of a practiced hand at work upon subjects well suited to it.

The portrait sketches are made with the artist's familiar ease and lucidity of workmanship, the "Black Stock" having the most of his characteristic quality. The exhibition closes on April 25.

Republicans of Southern Birth.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There are probably 30,000 voters of Southern birth in this city. We have little or no hope of electing a Democratic President, but since Brownsville has been turned into a social issue, in which the South is deeply interested, we will meet colored organization with white organization. All my friends here are for Taft solely because of Brownsville.

SOCIETY, AS FARMERS, GIVES A COUNTY FAIR

HUMAN ROOSTERS IN FIGHT

The County Fair given last night by Auxiliary No. 19 at the Waldorf-Astoria for the benefit of the Stony Wold Sanitarium was quiet as advertised. The red room was hung with posters of harvesters, lawn mowers, and cream separators, while all around flocked the farmer guests in great numbers. One man dressed as the conventional "Rube" voiced the sentiment that he felt foolish wandering through the Waldorf in those clothes, but a pretty milk-maid in pink consoled him by the remark that at the worst none of his friends would recognize him.

The first booth was the fortune-telling, under the direction of Mrs. Alfred Wagstaff. Here were the girls in gypsy costumes, from the "Lady Babby" sort made popular by Maude Adams to the genuine witch array, with black pointed cap and broomstick. Beyond the fortune-telling booth people were winning many cigars by "hitting the darkey's head."

The group which drew the largest crowd was the "exhibition of grown-up babies" presided over by Miss Elsie Sanford. There they were, some ten of them, nearly six feet tall, and clad in anything from a cap and nightdress to the regular Buster Brown, and every one of them, even the innocent-looking one with yellow curls tied with baby-blue ribbon, smoked cigarettes.

Next to the baby show was the soda fountain, where soft drinks were served by girls in pink-and-blue checked ginghams, wearing sun-bonnets. These were the Misses Annie Sturgis, Eleanor Robinson, and Mary Pyle. Peanuts were sold by the Misses Alice and Annie Riggs, who were dressed in white muslin Dolly Varden gowns.

As for the spectators, there was everything from a barker with a 20-carat glass diamond scarfpin to a goodly number in formal evening gowns. One little "country girl" exclaimed to a man in evening clothes: "Thank goodness, you're the one person I've been able to recognize."

The real circus stunts began later in the evening in the ballroom. The jockeys who drove the hobby-horses were resplendent in white breeches and bright-colored satin jackets. The "real life" lion, a man in the lion's coat, was led around the room by Miss Ina Kissel, and there was a take-off on the Barnum and Bailey balloon horse by an equestrienne. Two well-trained roosters, Gardner Perry and Newbold Herrick, entered the ring for honors. The drivers in the chariot race were Miss Dorothy Moran and Miss Nellie Rogers.

The dance feature of the evening was the Serrents tarentelle, done in the native costumes by the Misses Mary Mason Hasell, Helen McLaughlin, Doris Bissell, Ruth Davis, and Paul Hammond, William Bowers, Gilbert Jones, and Robert Locke.

D. A. R. IN FACTIONAL FIGHT.

Many New York Delegates Avoid Reception to Mrs. McLean, President.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Official business and patriotic memorials have apparently taken second place in the gossip of the Daughters of the American Revolution, now in session here, for little else is now talked of but the factional differences in the New York delegation. The contest between the McLean, or administration, faction and the anti-administration people, popularly known as insurgents, has now culminated in an open break, which neither faction is taking the trouble to conceal.

Many of the most prominent New York Daughters absented themselves from the reception to-night to Mrs. Donald McLean, the President General, given by two prominent New York Daughters, Mrs. Charles H. Terry, President General, and Mrs. Henry S. Brown, Assistant Historian General.

Not only did they remain away, but they gave a supper of eighty covers to Mrs. Henry Roberts of Utica, the retiring State Regent of New York and chief of the "insurgents." This action on the eve of the election of State Regent and State Vice Regent, which will take place to-morrow evening, indicates that the contest will be hard fought.

The supper to Mrs. Roberts, it is said, grew out of the fact that she was not invited to the reception to Mrs. McLean. Not only was Mrs. Roberts left out in the cold, as far as the reception was concerned, but many of the members of the New York chapters who had come out in support of Mrs. W. C. Story's candidacy for State Regent were likewise forgotten.

Mrs. McLean is said to be throwing the support of the administration to Mrs. Henry Munger of Herkimer, the present State Vice Regent, in her candidacy for the State Regency. The State delegation is so evenly divided between the factions that the result of the election is in the greatest doubt.

MISS CHEATHAM AT THE LYCEUM

Tells About Pussy Cats, Small Boys, and Other Nice Things in Her Engaging Way.

ANNUAL EASTER RECITAL

Familiar Numbers Were Especially Appreciated by an Audience Which Included Many Prominent Persons.

Miss Kitty Cheatham told about pussy cats, little boys, and other nice things at the Lyceum Theatre yesterday afternoon, while an appreciative audience testified that, as she tells about them, they are of first importance. That is Miss Cheatham's way. She can see the tragedy of a dolly bleeding sawdust, and she can make others see it so that they don't know just whether to laugh or cry, and usually wind up by doing both. As for little boys, she appears to know all the phases of the ever-changeful species, and is able to show them at their best or at their worst. In either case, they appear delightful.

Miss Cheatham's Easter matinée has come to be an institution, and it is always welcomed. Her entertainment is unique. But sometimes she has had better programmes than the one she gave yesterday, for there were less of the strictly childlike things, and she is always at her best in these. There were less of the negro melodies, too, which, as she herself said by way of introduction, are becoming fewer every day, and, therefore, ought not to be slighted.

The numbers reminiscent of her former programmes were undoubtedly the most popular of the afternoon, and that delightful piece about "The Cow," given with the childish quavering, childish treble, had to be repeated. The Liza Lehmann songs, from which rather more was expected, (they are new here, and provide setting for four of Lewis Carroll's nonsense songs,) seemed a bit fragile as compared with the effort put into them. A lullaby by Sidney Homer was a soothing and insinuating thing, and the familiar "Baby's Catechism" of George MacDonald, given by request, justified the asking. Miss Cheatham did nothing more artistic during the afternoon.

Three pleasant little songs by Frederick McDonald, with the composer at the piano, were followed by a plaintive bit of negro melody, and a particularly quaint and amusing number was "The Puppy and the Poppy," (Gerrit Smith,) in which pride was properly humbled by one fell snap, aptly illustrated in Miss Cheatham's engaging way.

Edith Wynne Matthison, William Rann Kennedy, Maxine Elliott, Katherine Kidder, Mme. Genee, and other prominent professionals were among those present, and there were many children.

MORE GOLD ENGAGEMENTS

Time Money Rates Fall Under Accumulating Deposits—Grain Prices Up, Cotton Down.

The resumption of business on the Stock Exchange yesterday after the triple holiday brought no marked changes in the character of the trading. In point of volume, transactions were little heavier than those of the business days of last week, or the preceding week for that matter, and the activity of a small group of professional traders was conspicuous. Prices, however, were distinctly heavy. For this there was no explanation in the day's news, which had to do mainly with the engagement of $500,000 gold for export, in addition to the $2,000,000 taken last week; sharp declines in rates for time loans; a rise in wheat prices and a break in cotton quotations. Somewhat heavier than the rest of the market were the specialties which figured so prominently in the trading of the early days of last week. Interborough-Metropolitan stocks and bonds fell away; Third Avenue declined in similar fashion, and the numerous pool favorites of one kind and another suffered under realizing sales. The rise in wheat appeared to be nothing more than a reaction from the low prices made some days ago under the influence of the unexpectedly good news from the crop areas. At least the grain markets had little more than this to offer in the way of explanation. One factor in the advance was doubtless found in the decrease in the world's shipments, the total being 6,700,000 bushels, or some 50 per cent. under the figures for the corresponding week of last year. The decline of $1.50 a bale in prices on the Cotton Exchange was likewise without definite explanation, but the disposition there was to attribute the movement to bearish operations by speculators in connection with sales by Liverpool, these reflecting the small trade in cotton cloths. The stock market here was without inspiration from European markets, all Bourses there being closed for the Easter Monday holiday.

Saturday's bank statement, with its increase of $11,750,000 in cash under the average system, and its showing of a cash surplus at the close of the week of some $53,000,000, which is only $5,000,000 under the highest surplus of 1904, although well under the $111,000,000 of February, 1894, throws light enough on the day's gold engagement, as well as on the decline in time money rates. Dull business is driving interior money to this city to seek the 2 per cent. rate which the banks here pay upon the country balances, and the accumulation naturally forces declines in interest rates. The outward movement of gold, which so far amounts to only $2,500,000, will have to be substantial indeed to create uneasiness. The intentions of the Treasury Department as regards withdrawals of United States deposits have not been made known, but unless the policy is to recall heavy amounts the gold movement will hardly be affected.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 20.—Tonopah Belmont was quite active, but its early advance, slight though it was, did not hold. Tonopah Mining was less active, but firmer. The public utility stocks held well, but there was little appreciable change among the leaders. Some attention was directed to Lehigh Valley, which under active trading advanced a point, only to lose it later. Sales, 18,430 shares.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Declines General in Sluggish Market with Weakness in Coppers.

MINOR LOSSES AT CLOSE

Mining Issues in Which Activity Is Usually Marked Find Only Nominal Market—Standard Oil Strong.

Curb trading was stagnant yesterday, with small losses general in the sluggish market. The copper shares, which are usually the leaders, found a market of nominal proportions, and prices fell away fractionally before the light offerings. Cumberland-Ely sold only 900 shares, and the close was ⅛ below the opening at 7⅞. Nevada Consolidated sold only 400, closing even with the opening at 11¼. Miami Copper lost ⅜ on the day's trading of 2,800, selling down from 5 to 4¾. Standard Oil was the one issue to show marked strength. Transactions of 80 shares put the prices up from 565 to 574.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Optimism Before the Fact.

Before the opening of the market yesterday sentiment appeared to be very badly mixed, but the opening quotations and subsequent development of strength changed some of the doubtful ones into optimists with the result that the prevailing feeling at the end of the first hour and during the greater part of the forenoon session was hopeful. This speculative hopefulness seemed to be based primarily on the theory that the powers that be in the speculative world had decided that prices should be advanced to a higher level, and those who accepted that situation strengthened their views by the assertion that the impending issue of bonds was in itself a logical explanation of a sure betterment in prices. As a matter of fact, those who were bullish on the market appeared to disregard unfavorable influences and eliminated them, or explained them by the suggestion that they were not really serious. It might be said that the reaction in the afternoon scarcely served to modify the optimism of those committed to the long side. Those who looked on without bias simply regarded the market as professional without any definite trend, so that at the close there were probably three parties in the limit of ranks of the active speculators.

Inspiration for Bears.

Every bear was fortified yesterday to combat all optimistic assertions made by those who did not agree with him that the market should recede very sharply. First of all the developments over the holidays were cited, and then the uncertainty of business and politics were emphasized. The developments in the labor world were uniformly used by those committed to lower prices, and the various resolutions by the labor leaders were pointed to as ominous. The killing of the Aldrich bill was another morsel for the bear element. Then there were the gold exports, the possibility of trouble between Italy and Turkey, or France and Turkey, and the absence of bond activity. Furthermore, the floor reports had it that there was very little activity in the loan crowd. Unofficial reports had it that many railroads were experiencing very poor business. The Erie earnings came out in confirmation. Here were enough items to stimulate any bear, but when the market opened up his faith weakened a bit.

Discussing Bond Outlook.

Some of the advices from Chicago yesterday told of a distinct improvement in bonds there, and details were given which would indicate that the market for investment securities was improving daily. Not all the dispatches were unanimous in this respect, and some suggested that while there had been some betterment there was nothing to justify any belief in the permanence of the improvement. Somewhat similar reports were received from Boston, and part of the gossip had to do with a suggestion of activity and better prices here. One of the best informed men of the Street gave his ideas of the situation in this fashion: "This bond market has no general trend. Its development is from day to day. One might take the general market of the past two weeks and say that there had been an improvement. It must not be forgotten, however, that this comparison would be with the preceding two or three weeks, and would have little value. If you take a period of absolute apathy and compare a period of slight improvement it will show to the benefit of the latter. But if you compare present conditions with ordinary times of activity in the bond market there is nothing very stimulating in it. The element of permanence, either in activity or price, is not in evidence. It is a little too early for optimism."

Harmonious Steel Meeting.

Interest in the annual meeting of the Steel Corporation was not very keen, even though it had been stimulated a little by the talk of a possible row on the question of bonuses. When the official statement was made that the meeting had been entirely harmonious it was accepted as a matter of course, and gossip reverted to the possible showing of earnings for the first quarter of the present year, the unfilled orders on hand on April 1, and the chances for the maintenance of prices for the various products. It would appear that the maximum estimates for the earnings for the first quarter are $17,500,000, while other figures are below $17,000,000. Consequently any statement of earnings approximating these figures will not be a surprise to any one who has followed the gossip. There are many who hold that the general market would be benefited by a reduction in the prices of finished products by the various steel companies, but it is probable that the committee which has the matter in charge is the best informed.

Gold Exports Ignored.

Gold exports were not large enough to attract special attention, and apparently there is no disposition in speculative quarters to worry over the outgo of gold. The extreme ease of call money, the dullness in the time money market, and no impending necessities so far as surplus funds are concerned, make this question of transferring gold back to Europe a minor one. The surplus reserve here is growing steadily, and apparently is not an influence except in a negative sense, in that it neutralizes any adverse effect that talk of the withdrawal of Government deposits or the exports of gold might have. There is a good deal of talk as to the mortgage demands in the near future and some bond men do not hesitate to say that the comparatively high rates which may be obtained for money lent on high-class mortgages operates against investment enthusiasm in the matter of securities.

Northern Pacific, Seeing Increased Business Ahead, Gets Ready for It.

SEATTLE, April 20.—C. M. Levy, Third Vice President of the Northern Pacific, said yesterday that his company would spend $1,500,000 in the next sixty days for freight cars, in anticipation of increased business.

"Business has steadily increased since the first of the year," said Mr. Levy. "January was our lightest month, but there was a slight improvement in February. March was a great deal better than the preceding month, and the records for April indicate that traffic is continuing on the upward trend.

RAILROADS TAKE UP RATE INCREASES

Eastern Trunk Line Presidents Meet and Declare Moderate Advance Necessary.

NO DECISION YET REACHED

Proposed Increase of 10 Cents a Hundred Pounds on First-Class Freight Between New York and Chicago.

Presidents and other executive officers of the Eastern and New England railroads met yesterday in the Trunk Line Association offices in the Terminal Building and discussed the matter of increasing freight rates in the trunk line territory. The belief of those who attended the meeting was that rates should be increased, but no definite decision was reached.

After discussion regarding an increase in class rates and also in some commodity rates, the meeting adjourned with the understanding that the question would be taken up at a subsequent meeting.

President Baer of the Reading Company was among those who attended the meeting, at which were represented the Pennsylvania lines, the Baltimore & Ohio, the Reading, the Erie, the New York Central, the New York, New Haven & Hartford, the Boston & Maine, and other roads in the trunk line territory.

One of the primary objects of yesterday's meeting was to discuss the recommendations of the traffic officers of the Eastern lines, recommending that all class rates be advanced to provide for the increased cost of operation, and to assure such a profit to the railroads as would enable them to go on with development work and meet the demands for improved facilities.

The increases recommended were 10 cents a hundred pounds between New York and Chicago in the first-class rate, which is now 75 cents a hundred pounds; 8 cents in the second-class rate, 7 cents in the third-class rate, 5 cents in the fourth-class rate, 4 cents in the fifth-class rate, and 2 cents in the sixth-class rate.

A statement was issued after yesterday's meeting in which it was stated:

> The traffic officials of the different roads have been for some time engaged in making a study of freight rates, and are in favor of increases, varying with the different classes and commodities. It was generally believed by those attending the meeting that present conditions required that an increase be made, and the meeting adjourned for each road to give further consideration to the subject.

No date has yet been fixed for the next meeting.

Lincoln Trust Co. Capital Reduced.

The stockholders of the Lincoln Trust Company ratified yesterday the proposition to cut the capital stock to $750,000 and transfer the freed capital to surplus.

TRANCE CAPTURES THE OZONE STAKES

Griffin's Filly Handily Beats Good Field of Two-Year-Olds in Fast Time.

FOUR CHOICES SUCCESSFUL

Mazuma, at 12 to 1, Wins All the Way as the One Victorious Outsider at the Aqueduct Track.

Trance, twice a winner at the Aqueduct meeting, and both times in stake events, took place as the best bargain in race horses that the season has produced when she captured the Ozone Stakes yesterday from the most notable field of two-year-olds that the Spring has brought together. Trance is the filly which, weeded out of the yearlings bred by James R. Keene at Castleton Stud and sold to H. T. Griffin for $500, came back from a Winter in California to beat one of the smart fillies of the great Keene stable in the race for the Rose Stakes last week.

Yesterday, in the race for the Ozone, she repeated her victory, again in fast time and with increased weight up, then beating two starters from the Keene stable among the dozen horses that finished behind her.

In her first race at Aqueduct she ran a half mile, aided by a strong wind, in 0:46 2-5. With but a light breeze blowing yesterday, she took up 109 pounds, 5 pounds more than in her former race, and was first going away from her field at the end, again in 0:46 2-5. The race was the sixth that Trance has started for since she began her racing career in San Francisco on Jan. 2 by winning in her first start, and the fourth that she has won, with a second and a third to her credit in her losing races, and a total winning account of $4,445 as offset to her original cost of $500.

In three other races, starters from the Keene stable had much the same fortune, though of the five starters from the establishment the Keene colors once filled second place and once landed third. The chief disappointment of the five Keene starters, however, was Wild Pigeon, which was made an odds-on favorite in the closing race, and after racing well forward all the way was beaten out in the last furlong by the Newcastle stable's Preceptor, which, at 4 to 1, was first, two lengths in front of Wild Pigeon.

Red Bonnet, in the six furlongs for maidens three years old, was another favorite from the Keene stable, but Red Bonnet never looked dangerous. Mazuma, one of the outsiders, at 12 to 1 in the post betting, making about all the running and winning cleverly by two lengths from Montauk, with Red Bonnet third. Sandal, the Keene entry in the opening race, was outrun from the start to the finish by Berry Maid, the favorite, Berry Maid winning rather easily by a length and a half from Queen Marguerite, with Sandal unplaced. DUAL MEET IN TANK.

New York Swimming Association Wins First Honors in Natatorium.

The New York Swimming Association held its first dual meet last night and easily defeated the Bath Beach Swimming Association team by the score of 37 to 17. The events were contested in the natatorium of the Public Bath on Twenty-third Street and Avenue A and were witnessed by a crowd of spectators, of which a fair proportion were women. Of the five events, the New York Swimming Association captured first place in the 50-yard and the 220-yard swims, the fancy diving contest, and the dual relay race. R. Mulvey of the Bath Beach team took the only first place for his team by beating his field in the 100-yard swim in 1:10 4-5. The best individual performance was made by R. Stern of the New York Swimming Association, who gradually drew away from Spielberger and White in the 220-yard race and won handily in 3:10.

The Bath Beach swimmers redeemed themselves later in the evening when they won the water polo contest, Kelly making the lone tally for his team.

The special open 100-yard race was won by L. de B. Handley of the New York Athletic Club with a handicap of two seconds in the final heat. Karl Schmitt, formerly Captain of the College of the City of New York swimming team, made his début as a member of the New York Athletic Club in this race. He was on scratch and the best he could do was to secure second place in his heat. The summaries:

Tennis Men Play in Doubles.

The lawn tennis players of the top flight resumed their doubles matches and William A. Larned and George L. Wrenn, Jr., and the old-time National champion pair, Holcombe Ward and Beals C. Wright, yesterday came through the winners. The tournament at the St. Nicholas Rink received some reorganization so that the disappointing features of last week and the unfinished competitions should not be repeated. The changes placed the tournament upon the round-robin basis, and all contests other than those remaining unfinished were placed on the schedule as the best two out of three sets so as to materially lessen the period of play and finish before darkness makes good play impossible.

In the first match Larned and Wrenn won 6—2 and 6—4. The points were 35—23 and 38—31. Following this match Ward and Wright defeated Raymond Little and T. R. Pell in an unfinished match 6—4, making the total of the match 7—5, 8—6, 6—8, 6—4. A third contest resulted in favor of Little and Pell, who scored 4—6, 6—4, and 7—5 over Malcolm D. Whitman and Edgar W. Leonard.

Bridge Rowdies to be Suppressed.

Drastic measures have been taken by the Harlem Regatta Committee for the suppression of the gangs of rowdies who persist in throwing stones, pop bottles, and other missiles at the oarsmen on the river, from the different bridges along the Harlem while the athletes are out in their boats. At a meeting of the committee held last night at the Harlem Casino the actions of these rowdies, which have for the last few weeks become bolder than ever, were brought up for discussion, and James A. Miller, who served as a delegate to the committee from the New York Athletic Club, reported that he had been in communication with Police Commissioner Bingham relative to the suppression of the evil, and that official informed him that he had placed the matter in the hands of the Police Captains. Hereafter the bridges will be properly patrolled, and violators of the law arrested.

Sloan and Dankelman Win.

In last night's game of the team three-cushion tournament now being held at Doyle's Academy, Forty-second Street and Broadway, Tod Sloan and H. Dankelman defeated P. Leonhardt and D. Lawrence by a score of 20 to 19, in forty-four innings.

BONUS QUESTION NOT RAISED.

Nearly Half a Billion of U. S. Steel Stock Voted at Routine Meeting.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the United States Steel Corporation, held in Hoboken yesterday, passed off without any reference to the bonus system of rewarding officers and heads of departments. Nearly half of the company's capital of $950,000,000 was represented either by proxies to the management or by the stockholders themselves, of whom there were about twenty present.

Besides the election of officers the chief business was the ratification of contracts and purchases made by the Directors and the Finance Committee in the year, the most important being the purchase last Fall of the stock of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company, for which United States Steel bonds were given in exchange.

The following Directors whose terms expired were re-elected: George F. Baker, William E. Corey, John F. Dryden, Clement A. Griscom, Marvin Hughitt, Daniel G. Reid, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and Nathaniel Thayer. At the meeting of the subsidiaries, also held in Hoboken yesterday, the retiring Directors were also elected.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL FINANCING.

Files $30,000,000 Equipment Trust Mortgage Pending Permanent Plan.

The announcement that the Illinois Central has filed a mortgage covering an issue of $30,000,000 equipment trust obligations indicates, seemingly, that the road is carrying out the plan outlined for providing for its requirements pending the completion of the plan for the permanent financing of the undertakings in connection with which a large floating debt was incurred.

The stockholders will shortly meet to approve an issue of 30 per cent. in new stock, of which 15 per cent. will be offered to the stockholders at par, payable in installments. Before this plan was announced it was made known that the equipment issue would be resorted to, but it was explained that none of the equipment bonds were to be sold and that they were merely to be used as collateral for loans which would eventually be paid off with the proceeds of permanent securities.

THE COTTON MARKET.

Weakness Follows Long Holiday—Closes at 14 to 23 Points Loss.

Cotton made new low records yesterday under bearish trade advices from Germany and reports of no improvement in the domestic cotton goods situation, which unsatisfactory weather over the holidays failed to counteract. The close was steady at a decline of 14@23 points, as compared with the closing prices of last week. Sales were estimated at 275,000 bales.

The market opened steady at a decline of 2@7 points, and at first there was a demand for new crop positions on reports of too much rain and washouts in the Western belt.

Liverpool was closed.

The weekly total movement figures of the New York Cotton Exchange this year and last year follow: Port receipts, 7,616,886 bales, against 9,304,916 last year; overland to mills and Canada, 619,232, against 1,059,105 last year; Southern mill takings, 1,731,000, against 1,841,000 last year; stock at interior towns in excess of Sept. 1, 812,416, against 301,888 last year; brought into sight so far for season, 10,279,534, against 12,506,909 last year. The movement is for 230 days this season, against 231 days last season.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

WHEAT.—The market opened ⅞c up yesterday and advanced steadily to close firm at best prices on small world's shipments, a big decrease in the amount on passage, and another heavy falling off in the American visible supply which, including this country and Canada, is now 36,732,000 bushels, against 51,987,000 last year, and 43,943,000 two years ago. It was also reported that the Northwestern mills have taken practically all the cash wheat in their localities, and a Duluth wire stated that practically the entire stock of durum and regular grades had been sold to go out with the opening navigation. An official report was that Hungarian Winter crops have wintered well and Spring crops are in good condition. Exporters were rumored to have taken 10 loads. Continental markets remain closed until to-day. Cash wheat in New York closed firm, as follows: No. 2 red, quoted $1.02 in elevator, and $1.02½, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern Duluth, $1.10¼, and No. 2 hard Winter, $1.08, free on board, afloat.

CORN.—There was a break of 2c following large country offerings and a big movement. Later the market recovered partially. There were no sales for export. The weather was favorable for planting. The visible supply is now 5,822,000 bushels, against 7,074,000 last year. Cash corn in New York closed nominal in elevator and 72c asked, free on board, afloat, for No. 2; No. 2 white, 72c asked, free on board, afloat.

THE COFFEE MARKET.

Coffee was moderately active yesterday, but once more largely in the way of exchanges. The market opened quiet at unchanged prices. Sales for the day were reported of 62,250 bags.

European markets were closed. The Brazilian markets reported no change. For the last week Brazilian receipts have been smaller, reaching only 80,000 bags against 120,000 the previous week, 313,000 last year and 79,000 two years ago. Warehouse deliveries continued liberal, the New York deliveries being 119,317 bags against 60,281 last year and 65,857 two years ago. Fresh business is restricted by uncertainty regarding Government holdings and the character of the weather during the flowering season.

Spot coffee was quiet; 6c for Rio No. 7.

A Period of Sober Reflection
3
The Lawyers Mortgage Company is the only Mortgage Company that limits its mortgages to those on improved income-producing business or residence property within the limits of New York City. It rejects the extra risk involved in lending on vacant land and on special utilizations, such as theatres, churches, factories, etc.

It is the only Mortgage Company which limits its profits to one-half per cent. per annum. In Europe such limitation is required by law, and removes the temptation to accept doubtful loans in order to make greater profits.

GOLD HUNTER'S QUEST HELD UP BY ARREST

PLAN TO EXPLORE BRAZIL

George Mellville Boynton, a little man with a military bearing, who styles himself an explorer, and whose greatest ambition was to head an expedition into "darkest Brazil" in search of gold mines and hidden treasure, has come to grief. His dream of headings a band of intrepid adventurers on a dash into the wilds of South American jungles and mountains has become a nightmare, for the bold dreamer is now in a cell at Detective Headquarters, charged with "beating" a hotel.

"Col." Boynton, as he styles himself, was arrested yesterday in the Chemists' Club, at 108 West Fifty-fifth Street, only a short while after part of his remarkable story had come to the ears of the police. The police were not at all sympathetic with the ambitions of "Col." Boynton, and are rude enough to say that he would never have gone to Brazil gold hunting even if they had not interfered.

Boynton, who is a chemist and hails from Boston, conceived the idea of organizing an expedition to discover gold mines in the interior of Brazil. Some friends of his living in South America, he said, had told him of the existence of those mines, and some much-bethumbed maps and charts had somehow come into his possession which purported to show the exact localities where gold might be found.

The mines were worked years ago by the inhabitants, when fabulous fortunes were dug from them, so "Col." Boynton says, but wars and other untoward events had caused the modern Brazilians to lose track of the remarkable mines.

"Col." Boynton chose as a name for his party "Discovery Darkest America Expedition." For the motto and crest for the expedition he chose a red and blue boaconstrictor, twined around a staff, and just beneath a skull and crossbones. Above was engraved the motto: "A Brave Man Dies but Once; a Coward Many Times." And below the emblem was in bold-face print: "Discovery Darkest America Expedition, Headquarters Hotel Bellevue, Boston, Mass., U. S. A."

The next step was to get together the band of intrepid explorers. The "Colonel" decided that eighty would be about the right number, and that $500 apiece would be about the proper sum for each of the explorers to contribute to the cause.

"Col." Boynton then advertised in newspapers of this country and England for men. Those formerly in his employ say that his mail was often very large. Boynton's headquarters were in Boston until a week or so ago, when, thinking that New York might prove a more promising field, he came here and registered at the Hotel Hermitage, Forty-first Street and Seventh Avenue.

Boynton, during his sojourn at the Hermitage, attracted much attention. Almost every evening he would appear in the lobby resplendent in a uniform of khaki, with gold braid about the shoulders and gold buttons down the front. A big cavalry sabre hung from his belt and clanked about his legs and heels.

He wore, too, a small military cap, with sloping visor, also khaki colored, with some emblem in the front—just what the hotel people do not know, but they think it was the same red and blue boaconstrictor that appeared on Boynton's letterheads.

But one night there came the downfall of "Col." Boynton. W. A. Ballard, an ex-Lieutenant in the army, who stops at the Hermitage, had his doubts about Boynton, and said to him:

"My friend, you impress me as being a fraud. I don't believe you are a soldier or ever were one. You haven't the regulation uniform, in the first place, and you don't look like one, in the second place."

These were harsh words, but Boynton merely turned on his heel and walked to the elevator.

On last Thursday Boynton had been at the Hermitage a week, and the management had not seen a cent of his money. He had eaten his meals in his room usually. Sometimes his valets—he had two of them—would eat with him. The management sent word to Boynton's room that he would have to pay up.

One of the valets was hastily dispatched by Boynton to the hotel office with word that he would send down his check at once. He owed $30. But instead of sending a check, Boynton left the hostelry, and has not been seen by the management since. He went to the West End hotel, Riverside Drive and 173d Street, at Fort Washington Park, where he remained until arrested.

The police might never have learned of Boynton's scheme to organize that Brazilian expedition at $500 per adventurer had not his two former valets, J. A. Hitchener and J. S. Whitey, both negroes, appeared at the West Side Court yesterday and asked Magistrate Cornell what measures they should take to get possession of their trunks, which, they said, were being held at the Hotel Hermitage for an unpaid board bill of Boynton's.

Magistrate Cornell told the two valets to see Lieuts. Nelson and McConville of Headquarters, and gave them a note to the detectives.

"This looks to me like a get-rich-quick scheme," said the Magistrate.

FIGHT ON MILITIA SHIP.

Nine Negroes Battle on the Granite State—Trophies Stolen.

Members of the naval militia who have their quarters on the Granite State, which lies at the foot of West Ninety-seventh Street, in the North River, were entertained last Saturday evening by nine negro fighters. Betting as to the winner ran high. It was a general mix-up. When the referee called time each man hit at the first head he saw, and the mêlée lasted nearly half an hour. The contestants then retired to the room which had been assigned them as a dressing room and which contained the Franklin Trophy for sharpshooting, the International State Divisional Battery Trophy, and a number of medals and figures in bronze. When they left the ship it was noticed that the contents of the room had also left.

Shipkeeper Allen W. Walls notified Police Headquarters that the souvenirs had disappeared, and gave the names and addresses of the fighters. Detective Trainor arrested eight of them and expects to get the ninth man to-day.

The men arrested bore evidence that the nine-hands-round fight had been anything but a friendly bout, despite the denials by Navigating Lieut. Barnard that the fight took place.

CLERKS CONFESS BRIBERY.

Received Money for Expediting Land Deals and Giving Out Information.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Testimony of a sensational character was given to-day by two former Land Office clerks in the Hyde - Dimond - Benson - Schneider land fraud causes before Justice Stafford in the Criminal Court.

These witnesses were Woodford D. Harlan and William E. Valk. Both testified to having received large sums of money for expediting land deals and for divulging information about boundaries of proposed forest reserves. The testimony marked the first chapter of evidence procured through the "immunity bath" process.

It is said that Harlan and Valk were granted immunity to testify as to essential facts in the alleged scheme to acquire land in California and Oregon.

CUPID'S MAIL ORDERS FAIL.

Girls' Letters Seized and They Must Testify Against Matrimonial Agent.

Special to The New York Times.

WATERBURY, Conn., April 20.—Trying to get a husband by mail has got Rose McCarthy, 26, and Anna Bliss, 28, into a position where, with their love letters confiscated, they must now go to Chicago to testify in the Postal Service case against a matrimonial agency.

They were out of work, and Miss Bliss says she thought matrimony with any kind of a husband better than silent factories. So they were in the midst of a joyous correspondence, one with a Georgian and the other with the son of a Patent Commissioner. They had photographs and the whole love outfit when the Government detectives came into the spirit of their dreams. Miss McCarthy vows she will sue the agency for failure to keep its promise, but Miss Bliss has gone to Rhode Island.

LONDON IS READY FOR OUR TEACHERS

A Committee of Prominent Men Already Chosen to Welcome the Visitors.

50 MAY GO FROM NEW YORK

Alfred Mosely to Ask Board of Education to Increase Delegation—Outside Cities Select Representatives.

Alfred Mosely, C. M. G., of London, who has been in New York ten days, working in conjunction with the National Civic Federation in arranging for the visit next Fall and Winter of 500 American public school teachers to the County Council schools of England, announced last night the plans which have been made in England for the reception of the teachers.

A reception committee composed of many of the most prominent men of London has been formed. Among its members are the Archbishop of London, the Lord Mayor of London, Joseph Chamberlain, R. McKenna, President of the Board of Education in the British Cabinet; A. J. Balfour, ex-Prime Minister; Lord Reay, ex-President of the Board of Education; Prof. T. H. Warren, Vice-Chancellor of Oxford; the Duke of Sutherland, K. G.; Prof. M. E. Sadler, Sir Henry Mortimer Durand, Prof. William Osler, formerly of Johns Hopkins University, now of Oxford; Ambassador Whitelaw Reid, Canon Lyttleton of Eton, Principal H. R. Reichel of Bangor University, Principal E. H. Griffiths of Cardiff University, Dr. W. H. Gaskell of Cambridge, and Austen Chamberlain, M. P.

In caring for the comfort of the teachers throughout the time they are in England Mr. Mosely will be assisted by a special committee headed by R. Blair of the London County Souncil, composed of members of the Mosley Educational Commission of 1903, who are desirous of reciprocating the courtesies shown the English visitors to the United States a few years ago, and by local committees in all the principal towns and cities of England.

"Persons of social prominence in the principal cities to be visited will fix certain receiving days on which they will welcome the teachers to their homes," said Mr. Mosely last night. He also expressed the hope that many of the teachers will visit him at his country home near London.

"Boards of Education throughout the United States are taking prompt action on the proposal to send the teachers to England on this trip," declared Mr. Mosely. "New York, the first city to provide for leave of absence with full pay for twenty teachers, is now considering doubling the selection."

The Secretary of the National Civic Federation announced last night, in the same connection, the names of teachers from various States who have already been selected by the local boards to make the trip.

Mr. Mosely will appear before the Board of Education to-morrow and thank its members for the interest they have taken in the movement, and will probably suggest that the number of teachers to be permitted to go from this city be increased from twenty to fifty.
